Georgian Vows Law Key Plank

Combined AP & UPI

ATLANTA, Ga. — Gov. Lester G. Maddox of Georgia today announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The announcement that he will seek the Democratic nomination made before a nationwide television audience from Georgia's gold-domed state capitol, came as no real surprise. Maddox, impatient to get his campaign rolling, had already told delegates to the Democratic National Convention by letter that he would make the race. (See other political stories, page 2.)

AGENTS ARRIVE

Secret Service agents had moved into the Capitol earlier today and had searched the House of Representatives chamber that Maddox used for his news conference. Newsmen attending the conference were carefully screened.

"Our streets must be made safe again," Maddox told the chamber filled with supporters and newsmen.

RIPS CONFERENCE

He called the Paris peace talks nothing more than "surrender on the installment plan" and said the United States should pull out of the Paris peace talks unless the North Vietnamese immediately de-escalate the war. He said the country has been pursuing a no-win policy.

Maddox was interrupted several times by applause from the largely partisan crowd, mostly when he talked of Vietnam and the USS Pueblo incident.

"We should offer an apology if we were wrong, but if we were right, we should use every force necessary to get what is

Prisoners In Marine Brig Riot In Cells

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — Prisoners in the U.S. Marine brig rioted last night and burned one of the cell blocks in a noisy protest against regulations, a Marine spokesman said today.

The spokesman said eight of the inmates were injured as Marine military police firing shotguns moved in to quell the disturbance. He said none of the injuries were serious.

The commanding officer of the brig, a barbed wire-enclosed compound about three miles northwest of Da Nang, said the situation now is quiet. He added that damage to the compound of wooden buildings and quonset huts was light except for the one cell block which was heavily damaged by fire.

The spokesman said the disturbance began at 10:30 p.m. The prisoners were reported as objecting to saying "sir" to guards and other regulations that they claimed were an infringement on their rights.

Death Sparks Unrest; Two Face Charges

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Police have charged two white men with the killing of a Negro woman whose death touched off racial violence punctuated by sniper fire and property damage in several sections of the city last night and early today.

At least four persons were injured, two critically. Police made ten arrests.

Hardest hit was the predominantly Negro Avondale section.

Police said they were fired upon by snipers in Avondale—in northern Cincinnati—and in the west and east ends. No injuries were reported from the rifle and pistol bursts.

First-degree murder charges were filed today against William Harrison, 22, and Elvin Billman, 31, both of Cincinnati.

An 18-year-old Middletown, Ohio, girl, riding unknowingly through the riot area in Avondale with three friends received a serious eye injury when the car in which she was riding was halted by several Negroes.

One of the friends said a Negro struck her with his fist. Two other girls in the car were slightly injured.

A Negro youth was shot and wounded critically as he hurled bottles at police.

Officers said Harrison and Billman were arrested on descriptions supplied by witnesses at the shooting scene.

The two were arrested about an hour after the slaying when they entered a tavern several miles from the shooting scene. Police said one of them pulled a knife on the bartender and ordered him to give them a drink. Officers said several patrons at the bar subdued the pair and telephoned police.

Police said a knife and a pis-

DEPUTY TESTIFIES

Rustling Turns Out To Be Ackleys' Dog

By STEPHEN COOK

Rustling behind a closed door in the trailer house of slain Curtis and Shirley Ackley the morning their bodies were found led a deputy sheriff to believe the killers were still on the scene.

Sheriff's Deputy Alfred Curry, first police officer to arrive at the murder scene Jan. 13, revealed this while testifying yesterday at the Marin Superior Court trial of Johnny Lee Sommerhalder, 24, accused of the double murder.

Curry said he had just observed the bodies of the slain couple when he heard a noise behind the closed bathroom door. He rushed from the trailer house for help, he said.

When officers opened the door, Curtis Ackley's German Shepherd dog charged from the room and stood guard over his slain master's body, keeping officers at bay until Humane Society representatives arrived to remove the dog, Curry said.

Police have guessed that the burglars who killed the Ackleys placed the dog in the bathroom when they entered the trailer house before the murder victims walked in on the crime.

Most of the testimony yesterday dealt with identification of color and black and white

Eisenhower Condition Is 'Extremely' Critical

GEN. EISENHOWER
Condition worsens

Spasms Follow Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's condition is "extremely" critical, his scarred heart weakened by new spasms that twice rendered him unconscious last night, Army doctors reported today.

The doctors said Eisenhower suffered two additional episodes of the "rapid irregular heart action" during the day.

And while they said these, like the earlier ones, had been promptly controlled by electrical treatment, their use of the word "extremely" in the latest report seemed a more ominous note.

The complication to the "serious" heart attack that Eisenhower suffered yesterday afternoon is technically known as "ventricular fibrillation."

While the doctors of the Army's Walter Reed General Hospital did not say so in their medical bulletin released shortly before 1:15 p.m. PDT, the spasms can be fatal if not controlled.

Eisenhower lost consciousness twice last night during the spasms but doctors said he rallied after each one and did not appear to have suffered brain damage.

Damage to the brain can occur if the spasms prevent oxygenated blood from reaching the brain.

They said there was no evidence of this and Eisenhower remained alert.

SHORT SPAN

Eisenhower, 77, was stricken with his latest attack — the seventh in 13 years, the fourth in three-and-one-half months and the second in 10 days.

From the very start doctors clearly indicated that this was at least one of the most severe he has ever suffered because in their initial bulletin they described the attack as "another serious" one. On previous occasions when Eisenhower suffered his two most recent attacks at the same hospital the doctors initially described it only as a "heart attack" without use of such words as "serious" or "major."

DOCTORS GLOOMY

And in today's medical bulletin the doctors volunteered the information that their patient has remained in "critical condition" since the first report yesterday.

The complication that the five-star general suffered—on top of the basic heart attack called a "myocardial infarction,"—is technically called "ventricular fibrillation."

The condition consists of abnormal twitching of the muscles of one or both ventricles—the heart's two lower chambers, and the two chambers most directly concerned with the heart's blood-pumping action.

While the doctors said only that the technique employed "electrical means — defibrillation," this meant that they used a

CARS AND POLLUTION

Antismog Laws Temporary Aid?

By GLENN BECKER

SAN FRANCISCO — Recently passed legislation requiring vigorous air pollution controls on new automobiles will afford California only a 15-year breathing spell before auto-created pollution again starts to rise, a state expert told a committee of the Bay Area Transportation Study Commission (BATSC) yesterday.

George J. Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Air Sanitation of the state Department of Public Health, warned that by the mid-1980s, almost all old cars not equipped with antipollution devices will be off the road. At that point the expected decline in pollution from cars will end and the increase in traffic will send the rate up again.

HARD TO CONTROL

Furthermore, only one of the two main ingredients in smog is susceptible to control through currently available devices, Taylor added. These devices control the emission of hydrocarbons from gasoline engines, but they do not control emission of oxides of nitrogen.

The remedy, Taylor told the Innovations and Novel Systems Study Group of the commission, is a fundamental change in the common method of transportation.

With this warning in mind, the group then heard mechanical engineer Roy A. Renner of Livermore declare that the only thing preventing substitution of "clean" steam-driven autos for "dirty" current models is development of means to mass-produce the steamers at reasonable cost.

The current experimental steam models use kerosene as fuel for boiling water to produce steam. Renner said that low octane, unleaded gasoline would be more effective and less odorous than kerosene. He noted that the steam power units condense the steam, enabling them to re-use the same water and go hundreds of miles on a few gallons.

In terms of air pollution, Renner said in a written report to the study group, "Tests have already shown that experimental models of steam cars, constructed with technology available today, can by far exceed the most rigorous emission standards visualized for tomorrow" by gasoline engines.

AUTO CHART

Renner produced a chart comparing normal pollution by today's gasoline-driven autos, estimated pollution by 1972 models with antismog devices and pollution produced by current steam models. The amounts of hydrocarbons emitted per mile were, respectively, 2.5, 1.5 and 0.4 grams; of oxides and nitrogen, 8, 3 and 0.3; and of carbon monoxide, 45, 23 and 2.

Renner also lauded the steamer for its performance characteristics, claiming that a current experimental model developed by the Williams Engine Co. of Ambler, Pa., handles as well or better than many present gasoline models, with good acceleration.

These claims will get a rigorous test in an experiment promoted by San Francisco Democrat Assemblyman John F. Foran involving six steam-driven autos, the General Motors Corp. and the California Highway Patrol.

STEAMER TEST

Through Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 111, Foran, chairman of the Assembly Transportation and Commerce Committee, inspired a test by the highway patrol of six steamers. General Motors has agreed to provide six Oldsmobile chassis and $20,000 for each test car when the highway patrol selects a firm to build the steam engines.

Bruce R. Samuel, consultant to the Assembly committee, told the study group yesterday that the highway patrol was selected for the experiment because of its national reputation and the fact that it has its own testing grounds and maintenance shops.

One steamer will be used in each of the six CHP districts in California, according to Peter M. Finnegan, administrative

Fierce Viet Battles Costly To Both Sides

SAIGON (AP) — Fierce new battles flared up along the northern frontier, in the central highlands and east of Saigon, with heavy casualties reported on both sides, the Allied Command said today.

Allied troops repulsed four enemy attacks Thursday and yesterday and U.S. Marines making a helicopter assault yesterday against North Vietnamese positions ran into an enemy mortar barrage.

The actions left 157 enemy soldiers and 74 allied troops killed and 251 allied troops were wounded.

The sharp, scattered fighting stood out against what U.S. officials have interpreted as a long general lull in the war while the enemy refitted and rested its forces for an expected major offensive.

The heaviest action was around the training camp and artillery headquarters of the South Vietnamese 18th Division at Xuan Loc, 40 miles east of Saigon.

The Viet Cong sent sappers and riflemen against the installation behind a 300-round mortar barrage Thursday, then ambushed one of the division's battalions yesterday five miles southeast of the town. Vietnamese sources reported 100 enemy soldiers killed in the two clashes. They said 52 government soldiers were killed and 112 wounded.

In the northern sector, 15 enemy sappers got into positions of a U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division unit Friday as the enemy launched a strong mortar and ground attack against the American positions 15 miles northwest of Hue.

Spokesmen said 18 Americans were killed and 55 wounded and 17 enemy bodies were found, including those of three sappers

Bay Agency Stands Firm On Fill Plan

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission members yesterday refused to back down from the controversial key to their preliminary plan for the bay's future.

The plan says tideland property owners should not be compensated for not being permitted to fill, and major property owners have condemned this as a violation of traditional property rights.

The feasibility of the plan, however, hangs on whether this proposal will be upheld in an inevitable court test.

Yesterday's hearing was the first in which commissioners commented on the plan, released in June. Three public hearings were held on it around the Bay Area.

The plan is to be presented to the 1969 Legislature, which will decide whether to establish a permanent agency to control the bay.

Vice Chairman William D. Evers, arguing for the successful motion to make no change in the controversial proposal, said "we should be much more definite and hardnosed in telling the Legislature how much it would cost to do this (preserve the bay) with public money."

The commission's staff has not estimated the cost of saving the bay from massive filling, but previous reports by the commission acknowledged the cost would be beyond the ability of the public to pay it.

Only Commissioner Victor Sauer, Contra Costa County public works director, argued for compensation at least if a property owner holds clear title to his tideland. He noted that many titles to tidelands are clouded.

Chairman Melvin B. Lane of Menlo Park, while agreeing with the majority, said the plan "appears to be overly balanced to matters of ecology, and should give greater emphasis to desirable development of the shoreline."

Little public money will be available to provide public facilities along the bay, he said, "so we need to give greater encouragement to the private property owners."

Private development, however, "won't go in just to make something pretty," Lane added, "but would probably have to be part of some shoreline development."

The commission has the power to bar fill while it draws up the plan, but that power and the commission lapse 61 days after the final adjournment of the 1969 Legislature.

Commissioners, on a motion made by Marin Supervisor Peter H. Behr, also endorsed the plan's provisions for control of the bay shoreline by whatever agency replaces the commission.

Commissioners agreed to the plan's provision that the successor agency's jurisdiction would extend up to 1,000 feet inland, and that the new agency have no power to expand its jurisdiction without approval of the Legislature.

Left unresolved until a later hearing was the question of how far upstream would the agency's power extend in sloughs and tributaries "of major ecological importance."

The commission's jurisdiction now extends as far as tides extend, but Executive Secretary Joseph E. Bodovitz of Mill Valley said the new standard would reduce the area affected.

"It's important to draw a fixed line to make our plan more palatable to other jurisdictions," said Dr. William F. Upton, commissioner representing the Marin supervisors. (Behr represents the Bay Area Transportation Study Commission.)

A vote possibly affecting Marin was taken to recognize that spoils disposal areas may be needed "for channels to be dredged for pleasure boating." The preliminary plan requires spoils to be dumped either in deep water or in the ocean.

San Rafael and Saucelito channels are to be dredged next year, and disposal of the mud spoils has not been resolved. The change voted yesterday, however, conditions the change "on the outcome of further studies."

Marin County Public Works Director Donald R. Frost has estimated that spoils from the Saucelito Channel dredging would fill 70 acres of tidelands in Richardson Bay — if permitted by the commission.

Frost reported yesterday that the change to liberalize the plan's restriction on disposal of spoils could benefit future plans to dredge Gallinas Creek and Novato Creek.

Behr dissented from the vote to make the change, arguing it "could mean filling marshlands."

Another change approved was to delete the plan's proposed charge of $3,000 for each acre filled.

The next all-day hearing on the plan by the commission was set for 10 a.m. Sept. 5 in the State Building, 455 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco.

Fireworks Explosion Kills 28

ALICANTE, Spain (AP) — Rescue workers searched for more bodies today in the smouldering remains of a fireworks factory ripped apart yesterday by a blast that claimed at least 28 lives.

Twenty-three dead were recovered from the ruins in the town of Ibi, 50 miles from here. Five persons undergoing treatment at nearby hospitals died during the night.

Officials said they expected to find more bodies beneath the mounds of rubble.

Cause of the mishap has not been determined, but investigators speculated it started in a store of percussion caps manufactured for toy pistols.

Occasional small explosions continued today, frightening rescuers. Wives and children hoping to find missing husbands and fathers clustered outside the disaster area. The Ibi church was filled with mourners.

Two brothers who owned the factory, Juan and Francisco Serra Ferre, were listed as among the dead.

Mia Farrow Divorces Sinatra

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Frank Sinatra and Mia Farrow got a quickie divorce in Juarez, Mex., yesterday and went their separate ways.

The 50-year-old singer flew to the East Coast.

The 23-year-old actress, his wife in a May-December marriage that lasted a little more than two years, went home to mother at the one-time Sinatra honeymoon cottage.

Dressed in slacks, Miss Farrow appeared tired and nervous during the 30-minute proceeding in the civil court of Judge Lorenzo Holguin Seniceros. She told the jurist her life with Sinatra had been unbearable, and said she had not lived with him as man and wife since December 1967.

The slender blonde daughter of Miss O'Sullivan and the late director John Farrow went to India to meditate with Maharishi Mahesh Yogi after the separation.

Kennedy Declines Political Talk

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.N. Security Council condemned Israel yesterday for air attacks Aug. 4 in Jordan, which the Israelis said were aimed against Arab terrorist bases set up with Jordanian permission.

Jordanian officials said the raids killed 34 persons and injured 82.

Arab nations had wanted the 15-nation council to threaten Israel with sanctions in case of future attacks, but in 10 days of behind-the-scenes consultations the Arab resolution was watered down to state that the council would take notice of any new attacks.

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times reported today that West Germany was prepared to declare the 1938 Munich Pact "null from the outset," if it would lead to diplomatic relations with Czechoslovakia.

Prague's new reformist regime is reported to be demanding renunciation of the pact as a condition for recognizing the Bonn government.

Johnson's Convention Role Stirs Talk

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Johnson has been remaining relatively secluded at his hill country ranch while the campaigners scurry about seeking support. But he has one potent force going for him: Uncertainty.

Elliott Roosevelt, Florida national committeeman and son of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, contributed his share to the speculation yesterday by declaring in Miami Beach he expects Johnson to be drafted by the party.

Roosevelt said a wave of draft-Johnson sentiment would be launched by a stop to the bombing in North Vietnam.

And Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley didn't bat down any speculation when he appeared at a news conference in Chicago.

Was there any chance Johnson would get the nomination? "I wouldn't know," said Daley.

Did Daley hope Johnson will abandon his decision not to run and become a candidate? "He's been a great president," Daley replied.

White House press secretary George Christian also faced newsmen.

Has Johnson expressed any interest in the convention? "He certainly hasn't to me," said Christian. But "obviously he's interested in Democratic party affairs."

The President received an unannounced visit last weekend from Postmaster Gen. Marvin Watson, his prime contact with the Democratic National Committee. Cabinet visits are usually announced.

Roosevelt told newsmen: "I'm not privy to any inside information. But I've noted that the National Committee keeps advising us that the whole day of the 27th will be turned over to a eulogy of President Johnson and his administration . . . and they aren't scheduling any votes on the presidency until after the 27th."

The 27th is the President's 60th birthday.

In the campaign itself, meanwhile, Republican Richard M. Nixon received a promise yesterday of at least television appearances from former foe Gov. Ronald Reagan of California.

Democratic Chairman John Bailey announced there would be no floor demonstrations following candidate nominations at the convention. Sen. Eugene McCarthy had said prior to the announcement that his followers were planning a "different" style of demonstration.

Daley had said: "They won't stop Illinois from parading."

A strike by Chicago cab drivers added to logistics problems at the convention city, already troubled by a telephone strike.

Republican vice presidential candidate Gov. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland, who has been criticized by some Negro leaders, said he will meet with black leaders in California to explain his stand on civil rights.

Democratic Mayor Richard G. Hatcher of Gary, Ind., a Negro, said: "I think the Democratic party ought to give serious consideration to a black candidate.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, campaigning in New York City, said, "Robert Kennedy and I came to hold remarkably similar views on Vietnam."

VIET QUESTION

Humphrey said last night he supports full freedom for all political groups in South Vietnam and advocates an end to all bombing in the North "when restraint and reasonable response is obtained from North Vietnam."

Sen. George McGovern said in his home state of South Dakota that the government should pay farmers to produce more, not less, and dispose of the nation's surpluses.

He said the food should be used to fight starvation around the world.

Third party candidate George Wallace promised Indianans he would repeal open housing legislation if he's elected president.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy said the presence of rival delegations from Georgia would test whether the Humphrey forces "are sincere about having a truly representative convention."

A CHALLENGER

McCarthy's people have challenged the delegation headed by Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia on grounds of discrimination. The rival delegation, including State Rep. Julian Bond, is reported to be 3-1 for McCarthy.

Both Humphrey and McCarthy picked up about 15 delegates in the latest Associated Press poll. Humphrey showed 841½ first-ballot votes, McCarthy 450½ and McGovern 32½. The total needed for nomination is 1,312.

McGovern called the proposed preconvention television debate between McCarthy and Humphrey illegal, even though McGovern has been offered separate time.

McCarthy Aide Claims No Delegate Dealings

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Delegation chairman Jesse M. Unruh and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy forces share a loose alliance today in attempting to keep California's 174-vote Democratic National Convention slate united.

But there have been "no deals" with the powerful State Assembly speaker and ally of the late Robert F. Kennedy, said Gerald Hill, chairman of the antiwar California Democratic Council and co-leader of the Minnesota senator's campaign in California.

Originally pledged to the assassinated Kennedy, Unruh and the vast majority of the delegation remain publicly uncommitted as they prepare for the Chicago convention opening Aug. 26.

"We're supporting the effort of the speaker to keep the delegation unified," Hill said in an interview yesterday. "As he said, you can't deliver a delegation, but you can lead it."

Unruh displayed "this kind of leadership" in cooperating with Hill's council and other factions last weekend as they assembled a new slate of state party officers, Hill said.

Unruh and the CDC have feuded at times in the past — bitterly so on occasions.

Although Unruh so far has not been able to accept either McCarthy or Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey as a candidate, the Vietnam war issue serves as a point around which most California delegates can rally, Hill said.

"The vast majority of the delegation ranges from grave doubts to outright opposition" on the war, Hill said.

He added, "I'd be willing to consider" backing Unruh as a favorite son candidate on the first ballot although "I'm just one delegate and this would depend on the over-all feeling of the delegation."

Several delegates have indicated they want Unruh to be a favorite son. A close Unruh aide said this week he would not seek such a post, but probably would accept if a majority of delegates asked him to.

Hill said he has not been directly approached about the favorite son idea, but he's aware of some "phone calls exploring" such a possibility.

Abernathy's Group Sounds Nixon Boycott

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Southern Christian Leadership Conference has urged its members and friends not to vote for the Republican national ticket and has adopted a wait-and-see position on the Democrats.

"We are disenchanted with the nominees of the Republican party," said a resolution adopted yesterday by the delegates at a rally attended by more than 6,500. The resolution urged that no support be given to GOP presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon and his running mate, Spiro T. Agnew. This is the first time the organization has stepped into a national campaign.

WAITING ACTION

The resolution also said the SCLC would support the Democratic ticket—to be named in Chicago later this month—only if the party platform calls for ending the Vietnam War immediately and eliminating poverty.

SCLC delegates in another resolution called for an immediate cease-fire in Vietnam and a halt to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

The organization, founded by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., ended its first convention since his assassination April 4 in Memphis by affirming its commitment to nonviolence in the human rights struggle.

ADJOURNS SESSION

King's last public address was made on the eve of his death at Mason Temple where King's successor as SCLC president, Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, announced at 12:33 a.m. today the annual SCLC convention was over.

Abernathy earlier recalled that he introduced King the night of April 3, then pledged to continue leading a fight against poverty and for a guaranteed income.

One-Lane Traffic During Paving Job

The Miracle Mile between Ross Valley Drive and Marquard Avenue in San Rafael will be limited to one lane of eastbound traffic Tuesday while the street is paved.

Norris M. Rawles, director of the San Rafael public works department, said that the work will probably begin about 8 a.m. and continue all day.

New Czech Regime Gets Romania Nod

PRAGUE (AP) — Romanian President Nicholas Ceausescu warmly endorsed Czechoslovakia's reformist regime yesterday and called on feuding parties in the divided Communist bloc to settle their differences in "comradely" talks.

"At this time, so many differences have amassed between Socialist countries and in the movement that we regard it as a basic and most urgent requirement not to undertake anything that could bring new tensions or increase the present ones," Ceausescu said in a speech during his goodwill visit here.

The visiting chief of state, who also heads Romania's Communist party, and Czechoslovak President Ludvik Svoboda signed a 20-year treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance.

Civil Use Of Firearms Held Grossly Overplayed

MENLO PARK (AP) — Civilian use of firearms in urban riots has been grossly exaggerated in the press, Stanford Research Institute said yesterday And that has frightened many people into "arming themselves against future disorders," it adds.

Arnold Kotz, leader of an SRI team which made a five month study partly funded by Winchester and Remington firearms manufacturers, said Americans nationwide brought twice as many guns in 1967 as they did in 1963.

He said a conservative estimate puts 115 million firearms in private hands in the United States, more than one gun for every male in the country. The study said that in the age range of 14 to 65 there are probably two guns per man.

"Apparently many people believed the exaggerated press reports about civilians using guns during the riots," Kotz said. "Tragic consequences could result from this widespread fear coupled with widespread possession of firearms."

The results of the study, coupled with a strong recommendation for stricter gun control laws, were submitted to the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders.

The SRI report said: "The availability of firearms apparently contributes to human propensity to violence. Between 1962 and 1966, when U.S. population grew by 5 per cent, the number of guns in private hands increased by 11 per cent. In the same period, total deaths caused by firearms increased by 20 per cent.

"Broken down, the increase showed homicide by firearms up 38 per cent, accidental death by firearms up 22 per cent and suicide by firearms up 10 per cent."

Ray's Counsel Questioning A Fair Trial

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Attorneys for the man charged with murder in the death of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will present courtroom arguments Sept. 6 that their client cannot receive a fair trial in this country.

The attorney moved yesterday that the first-degree murder indictment against James Earl Ray be dropped because of "pervasive and widespread publicity" about the man charged in King's slaying here April 4.

Arthur J. Hanes Jr., who will join his father in defense of Ray, said in his motion before Criminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle that the publicity has removed "the presumption of innocence which must accompany him to trial."

Another motion asked that attorney Arthur J. Hanes Sr., and members of his staff be allowed access to witnesses, and that evidence to be used by the prosecution be opened to the defense.

Judge Battle set a hearing on the motions for Sept. 6.

Gun Fanciers In Final Drive Against Controls

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Gun fanciers launched a last minute effort to halt enforcement of the city's new firearms registration law yesterday as more that 400 residents filled out forms on the first day of preregistration.

The law, which requires registration of all firearms in the city by Nov. 1, was challenged in state Court of Appeal by attorney J. Edward Fleishell, representing a group of gun owners.

He asked the court to find the law invalid because it violates the constitutional right to bear arms and because state law has pre-empted the field. Fleishell petitioned the court to halt enforcement of the measure.

Ex-Leaders Quizzed On Greek Plot

ATHENS (AP) — Two former ministers of the outlawed Center Union party were questioned today in the police investigation of the attempt to assassinate Premier George Papadopoulos.

Reliable sources said Stellios Alamanis, 55, a former education and communications minister, and George Bakatselos, 62, a former minister of labor in the government of George Papandreou, were detained, then released after interrogation.

The same sources said Mrs. Constantine Mitsotakis, wife of a former cabinet minister, was being held under house arrest following an unsuccessful attempt to flee abroad yesterday. Her husband was said to have managed to escape from one of the Greek islands.

At least 20 politicians and ex-army officers are known to have been arrested since Papadopoulos narrowly escaped injury Tuesday in a bomb blast while being driven from his summer villa to Athens.

A government spokesman said the police cross-examination of Alexander Panagoulis, 29, the ex-army private alleged to have set off the explosion, was progressing. He declined to give any details.

Andreas Papandreou, son of former Premier George Papandreou, was accused by the Greek junta yesterday of being "morally responsible" for the attempt. He is leading a movement in Sweden against the Greek regime.

Alameda Threatening Tax Commute Boycott

A stiff economic boycott of San Francisco to protest Mayor Joseph Alioto's commuter tax was threatened yesterday by the chairman of the Alameda County Board of Supervisors.

Robert E. Hannon said all San Francisco firms may be barred from public contracts in his county if the city's commuter tax is put into effect.

The companies might lose "millions of dollars" worth of business as a result, he said.

Hannon, who is a lawyer, said he thought it would be legal for Alameda and the other suburban counties, including Marin, to invoke the ban.

The terms and bidding on public works projects and county purchases of supplies and materials could be set in such a way that San Francisco firms would be ineligible, Hannon said at a press conference in San Francisco yesterday.

Representatives of the five counties — Alameda, Contra Costa, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Marin — met yesterday with Richard Moore, county counsel of Alameda, and agreed to cooperate in taking joint court action against the tax.

Marin County Counsel Douglas A. Maloney attended the meeting in Oakland.

Supervisors from Marin and the other four counties will meet early next week to discuss legal action and the boycott.

Hannon said the boycott would not be complete, however, without participation by suburban consumers.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Mayor Alioto indicated there could be negotiations toward a regional tax compact.

Maddox's statements sounded much like the same speeches he has been giving for the past several years. He said many of the same things at a news conference Monday after he had announced his probable candidacy.

assistant to Foran. The test may last as long as a year, he said, to ascertain whether the steam cars can meet highway patrol standards.

The final speaker at the study group hearing was Stanley O. Blois, manager of commercial, industrial and agrilcutural sales for Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

Blois described with the aid of picture slides, dozens of industrial uses for electrically driven vehicles, as well as golf carts, and military vehicles which are employed for emergency power in the field on occasion.

Most experiments with electrically driven automobiles, he said, have involved unwieldly emplacement of electric power units in gasoline-engine chassis. A Chassis, built for an electric power unit would be an important advance.

The study group plans to sumbit a final report to the full commission Sept. 12, after an 18-month study of transportation problems and developments. The commission in turn will report to the governor and Legislature in October, according to study group chairman George M. Sulliman.

This account was given by police:

The slain woman, identified as Mrs. Willie Roberts, 50, had ordered two white men and a group of young Negroes who had been arguing near her cafe too leave the area.

Strawberry Market Hit By A Gunman

A soft-spoken, gun-wielding young man in a dark beret held up the 7-11 Market at 650 Redwood Highway, Strawberry, late yesterday, making off with an estimated haul of several hundred dollars.

Store clerk Joseph B. Reade, 26, told sheriff's deputies that he had just finished helping two customers when the robber, whom he described as a Negro in his mid-20s, of medium height and weight, approached the counter. The man had entered the store moments earlier.

The customers left and the robber asked Reade what he had in sweet wines, the clerk told the deputies. Reade said he knew little about sweet wines and the man mentioned pink chablis.

Reade took the man back to the case with the chablis. He opened it, then felt a gun in his ribs and heard the man say, "Oh, man, do me a favor. I want your money. Let's go to the register."

Reade said he looked over his shoulder, saw the man holding a revolver in his right hand, and proceeded to the cash registers at the front of the store. He followed the robber's directions in placing the folding money from the first in a paper sack. Then the man said, "The other register, and hurry it up."

The clerk said he told the man he was trying to act naturally so as not to arouse suspicion from passers-by. When he emptied both registers, the man took him to a rear room, looked around for any telephones and told Reade to stay there for five minutes. After a time Reade came out and called the sheriff's office.

The store opened for business less than six months ago. This was the third time it has been held up, reported sheriff's officers.

Erlin Facing Federal Hold Orders Now

Darren Guy Erlin, freed from Marin County Jail yesterday, is now being sought by federal officals in San Francisco.

A motion was filed yesterday before U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter to revoke Erlin's $5,000 bail set in May when he appealed a conviction for selling $700 worth of LSD.

A hearing on the motion was set for Aug. 23. If the court revokes the bail, Erlin could go into federal custody, according to Jerrold Ladar, chief of the criminal division of the U.S. Attorney's office in San Francisco, who made the motion.

Ladar also moved in the Federal Court of Appeals to dismiss Erlin's appeal on the LSD conviction on the grounds that Erlin has failed pursue the appeal.

Notice of the motion was hearing reached San Rafael yesterday, 30 minutes after Erlin was released from county jail, Ladar said.

Erlin, a former Fairfax resident who now lives in Hawaii, was jailed last week in lieu of a $25,000 bond on charges stemming from the confiscation of heroin and 300 pounds of marijuana at the Fairfax home March 23.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court had raised bail from $6,500 to $25,000. Judge Harold J. Haley of Superior Court Thursday reduced the bail to $7,500.

The federal LSD conviction in May resulted in a two-year jail sentence.

photographs of the murder scene and with a pathologist's description of the wounds inflicted on the Ackleys.

Dr. Robert B. Schneider of San Rafael, the pathologist, said Curtis Ackley died of four bullets to the brain, fired in close pattern into the skull just behind the left ear.

Shirley Ackley died either of strangulation with an electrical cord around her neck or by a bullet fired into her brain, he said.

Other wounds inflicted on the 34-year-old lady barber included two cuts to the skull bone on her forehead, two knife wounds in the back and a superficial bullet wound.

There was evidence that she could have been raped, he said.

The trial was recessed until 10 a.m. Tuesday in the courtroom of Judge Samuel W. Gardiner.

Sommerhalder, represented by Public Defender Jerome C. Durham, is the second Santa Rosa man to be tried for the Ackley double murder.

Kenneth Allen Preston, 20-year-old college dropout and member of the Grim Reapers, was tried, convicted and sentenced to death earlier this summer by a Marin Superior Court jury. He is on San Quentin's death row.

Farther north, about 10 miles below the center of the demilitarized zone, enemy mortars killed four U.S. Marines and wounded 82 as the Leathernecks landed by helicopter for an attack. American artillery returned the fire and killed 10 enemy soldiers, the U.S. Command said.

No Citations Yet In Freeway Plane Transfers

The California Highway Patrol has not decided whether to issue citations to Marin Aviation and the two pilots who taxied two planes down Highway 101 yesterday from the Marin County Airport to the Novato Fair Shopping Center, said Sgt. James C. Dukes of the CHP.

The firm had applied for permission to take overwidth vehicles down the highway and this was denied, Duke said.

"They did it anyway and are entirely in the wrong," he said.

Novato patrolman Richard A. Lingshore saw the two planes coming south on Highway 101 about 5 a.m. yesterday and called the patrol.

Reagan Signs Bill For Span To Pay Bills

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill authorizing the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District to pay some old loans, including one from Marin, was signed yesterday by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Marin and the five other counties in the district will be repaid at 4 per cent interest compounded annually for property taxes paid by their residents between 1929 and 1931 to help start the district.

Marin, which paid $14,220, will receive $60,695. A total of $1,994,849 will go to all counties.

The state will receive almost $6 million in payment of a $5 million loan obtained to build the second Waldo Tunnel and widen Marin approaches to the bridge.

The loan is not due to be repaid until 1971, but the district agreed to seek legislation so it can negotiate an early repayment.

small paddle-like metal instrument called a "defibrillator." This device can be applied to the chest outside the heart to send a stimulating current to the heart to overcome disturbed rhythm.

Eisenhower, the doctors reported, is receiving "continuous medication" designed to maintain normal heart rhythm.

The general is also receiving oxygen continuously—another index of the seriousness of the case.

The doctors' reference to the fact that Eisenhower has shown no evidence of brain damage obviously means this:

They are keeping close tabs on the possibility that the irregular heart action, if it should recur and persist, might seriously interfere with the blood supply to the brain. A relatively brief actual cut-off of that supply is damaging.

Warehouse Fire Damage At $300,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A fireman on a towering ladder was nearly caught by whipping flames as a blaze destroyed a block-long warehouse last night.

A nearby truck sent a stream of water up the ladder and George Smandra, 49, struggled down to safety.

Included in the losses were toys destined for Christmas sales.

Firemen said a hard wind hindered them.

"It was like fighting a fire in a furnace," said Deputy Chief Keith Calden.

Bay Helicopters Held Free Of 'Metal Fatigue'

Bay Area helicopters are free of the defect believed responsible for the fatal crash of a Disneyland helicopter in Los Angeles Wednesday, a company spokesman said yesterday.

Metal fatigue is believed to be the cause of the in-flight separation of a rotor blade on a copter belonging to Los Angeles Airways, the National Transportation Safety Board said yesterday.

Lloyd McDonald, a senior vice president for San Francisco-Oakland Helicopter Airlines, said a thorough investigation of its copters showed no signs of the metal fatigue believed responsible for the Wednesday crash which killed 18 tourists and a crew of three.

The crash was the second in three months of a Los Angeles Airways helicopter

Mrs. Johnson Plans Trip To Her Home

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Lady Bird Johnson is taking no chances in this era of political reassessment. She already has one foot out of the White House door and she is packing—just in case.

While others might suspect President Johnson might run again, the First Lady is convinced enough he won't. As an organized woman, she has taken inventory and already has her staff shipping boxes of books and personal objects of art which have graced the White House during their tenure.

Mrs. Johnson acted on the knowing advice of a former First Lady, Mrs. Harry S Truman.

Everytime a courier plane flies to the LBJ ranch these days, where the Johnsons are spending the month of August, some personal LBJ belongings are aboard. The Johnsons have spent some 30 years in Washington and it's a long haul back to Texas for all the accumulation of furnishings, gifts, plaques, awards, and photographs.

Much of the personal memorabilia will wind up in the LBJ Library, under construction at the University of Texas in Austin.

Tiburonites Entertain Head Of Government

By MOLLY MARIN

King Lejolan Kabua, ruler of the Marshall Islands, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jack Finke in Paradise Cay, Tiburon. The distinguished visitor arrived from his native country Aug. 5, and left Tiburon Aug. 13 for Washington, D.C. He will return to the home of his Marin friends today. He is accompanied by his interpreter, Eddie Balance. The Finkes became acquainted with the king when they lived in the Marshall Islands from 1959 to 1964, at the time Mr. Finke was resident manager for a construction project in the islands.

A COFFEE HOUR-Reception for the William Lovvorn family will be held at the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley following the morning worship service tomorrow. This will be a farewell for a family that has been prominent in Mill Valley church and school life for the past 13 years.

In Mill Valley he has served as principal of the Old Mill, Marin Terrace and Tamalpais Valley Schools. His church duties have included service on the board of deacons, the board of Christian education, the Sunday church school and the men's fellowship.

Mrs. Lovvorn has been active in the Sunday church school, serving most of her time as superintendent of the kindergarten department. She has been president of the Women's Missionary Society and of one of its circles and has also been serving as president of the Marin Christian Women's Club.

Illegitimacy Interest Brings Letter Questioning Statistics

DEAR HELEN:

A survey in New York City shows that one out of every six births is illegitimate, which means there has been a 112.5 per cent increase in unwed motherhood in the last ten years.

The statistics said the largest proportion of illegitimate births — 24 per cent in 1957, and 38.3 per cent in 1967 — was among non-whites, but the fastest rate of increase was for whites. Ten years ago their illegitimate birth rate was 1.7, and now it is 5.3.

This of course, is New York City, but the same trend is evident throughout the country.

It's kind of awful when you think that unwed motherhood has more than doubled in a decade. Is everybody becoming immoral? — SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED:

There's an old saying, "Some people use statistics as a drunk uses a lamp post: More to lean on than to shed light."

The rise in the illegitimate birth rate has one partial explanation that most people overlook: Ten years ago an unwed expectant mother "had to get married" because society pretty well doomed her if she didn't. And so she wasn't listed as a statistic — except later on, in the "divorce survey."

These days a girl is often counseled not to marry the boy.

This, of course, doesn't entirely explain away the increase in illegitimacies but perhaps it helps prove statistics don't tell the whole story.

Babies always have been and always will be conceived out of wedlock. Maybe we're more honest about admitting it now — H.

DEAR HELEN:

About "Jade" and "K.K." who called you names, and told old people to watch out or the teen world would stomp 'em: How insecure can two dumb little kids get? My friends and I couldn't stop laughing when we read their letter. It was a child's way to show soreheadedness by name calling and slander.

I'll wager they are very unpopular at school, especially with boys, as they show all too plainly they are under par in intelligence, personality and confidence.

They should remember that a person who is confident of his views does not have to use threats of violence to get across a point, and may I re-state an old but true phrase: "Empty barrels make the most noise." — JOHN

DEAR HELEN:

May I please apologize for Jade and K.K. and assure you that most teens wouldn't write a letter like that. While we sometimes don't agree with adults, we respect them and what they think and we appreciate those who go to bat for us. We say you and others who understand us are more welcome in our generation than those two stupid teeny-boppers who should be voted out of the teen race. — GORDON, JOAN, BILL AND LINDA

DEAR KIDS:

Several hundred teens blasted Jade and K.K. Only one stood up for them. In the interest of fair reporting, I'll print her letter:

Dear Smart Alec, Helen:

Where do you old bats get your answers — telling Jade and K.K. TO "go chew on a bar of soap." They told the truth, so you have to smart off.

You old fogies are all the same, misguiding kids so they can't have any fun. Well, you won't win because we're too smart. I dare you to visit the Thunderbird Rink on Saturday night. At times it's just one big love-in, and us Deadettes are right in the middle of it.

So drop dead, but print this letter first to prove you can take true criticism. — A DEADETTE

'Drinking' Diet Found Monotonous

There's no mystery about being overweight. It's a simple reflection of what and how much you eat. Most of our food is used to provide us with energy and heat. If we take on more calories in food and drink than we put out in energy, what is not used is stored as fat. If the calories we take in are fewer than those we expend, we draw on our supply of stored fat and lose weight.

The energy we put out varies from day to day, depending on the amount and the kind of work we do and on the surrounding temperature.

Many factors can contribute to our ignoring our appetite center and developing damaging food habits. Some people have overeaten since childhood in response to the coaxing of solicitous mothers who urged food upon them. Others blunt the communications from the appetite center with alcohol. And still others, for emotional reasons, ignore the message from the brain which tells them that they have had enough. When overweight ensues, as it inevitably will, the only practical way to cope with it is to retrain your eating habits through a day-to-day pattern of eating no more than the right amounts of a normal mixture of foods.

The key word here is mixture. The all-or-nothing character of most fad diets does you little lasting good and may do harm. This goes for the diet that is all liquid, the one which is limited to pineapple and lamb chops, to bananas and skim milk, the low protein diet, the high protein diet, or the favorite three years ago — the low carbohydrate or so-called "drinking man's diet."

If anyone could endure the monotony of any of these restricted diets indefinitely, he might indeed lose weight, although he might also develop constipation, secondary anemia and other ailments. But once the period of diet is over, he has not accomplished the most important factor in weight control; he has not learned good eating habits. He reverts to his old habits and gains back what he has lost, if not more.

Nor is the situation improved by the use of the so-called reducing drugs. One of the most widely used of these appetite depressants is the "goof-ball," a stimulant to the central nervous system which is popular with some so-called "turned-on" people. It goes without saying that the use of it does not contribute to the development of good food habits, and it can lead to a drug addiction. Another drug is a hormonal substance which is used in combination with a 500 calorie diet — which, without the drug, would undoubtedly result in as much weight loss. Patients who are administered this drug are seen daily by their doctors, and this supervision probably contributes to the weight loss. However, neither this nor any other magic formula trains the patient to acquire and sustain a sound pattern of eating.

If you want to eat in a way that will achieve a normal weight for you and hold it there, you must be persistent enough to follow a normal mixed diet of the proper caloric value week after week until the habit is firmly and finally imbedded. Your doctor can tell you what the diet should be, but only you can make it work.

FISHERWOMAN

Only Fulltime Professional Fly Caster In United States

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — She looks about as much like the stereotype of the weatherbeaten khaki clad fisherman as Phyllis Diller looks like Raquel Welch.

Yet Ann Strobel knows the angles of angling so well that she holds numerous national and international championships in casting, most of them won in competition with men.

"If the men resent me," she laughed, "they don't show it to my face. I don't know what they say behind my back."

Miss Strobel, a curvey, five-foot, four-inch, blue-eyed blonde, bills herself as the only fulltime professional fly caster in the United States today and travels the country demonstrating the intricacies of using fishing tackle.

She logs some 100,000 miles annually, giving demonstrations, lecturing at sports shows or clinics, talking up the sport she considers the world's most relaxing and also most exhilarating.

Miss Strobel's string of international fishing honors stretches from Lake Minnetonka, Minn., to Oslo, Norway. On Thursday she leaves for Linzerheidi, Switzerland, for a world competition in which all her competitors will be male.

When she set a world record for fly casting accuracy at Spa, Belgium, she was the lone woman among 106 men. She feels that the men look at her not as a woman but as a competitor trying to win just as hard as they are.

"Heaven knows," she said, "I've also had some of my greatest encouragement from the fellows, like the late Johnny Dieckman, probably the greatest professional caster of our time. Johnny convinced me to turn pro in 1959."

Miss Strobel, who lives in New Orleans, works as spokesman and ambassadress for the Garcia Corp., of Teaneck, N.J., the world's largest fishing tackle concern.

A native of Beckley, W.Va., Miss Strobel had moved to Minneapolis to work as a secretary. She started fishing trips after a girl friend invited her to join the Izaak Walton League, the unofficial international organization of fishermen.

Striped Walls

Striping walls is fashionable and produces very decorative effects, advises the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association. First, paint the walls in a chosen background color. After thoroughly drying, securely fasten masking tape to the surface, marking off the areas to be striped in the width you desire. Paint these designated areas in contrasting colors. When they are thoroughly dry, remove the strips of masking tape.

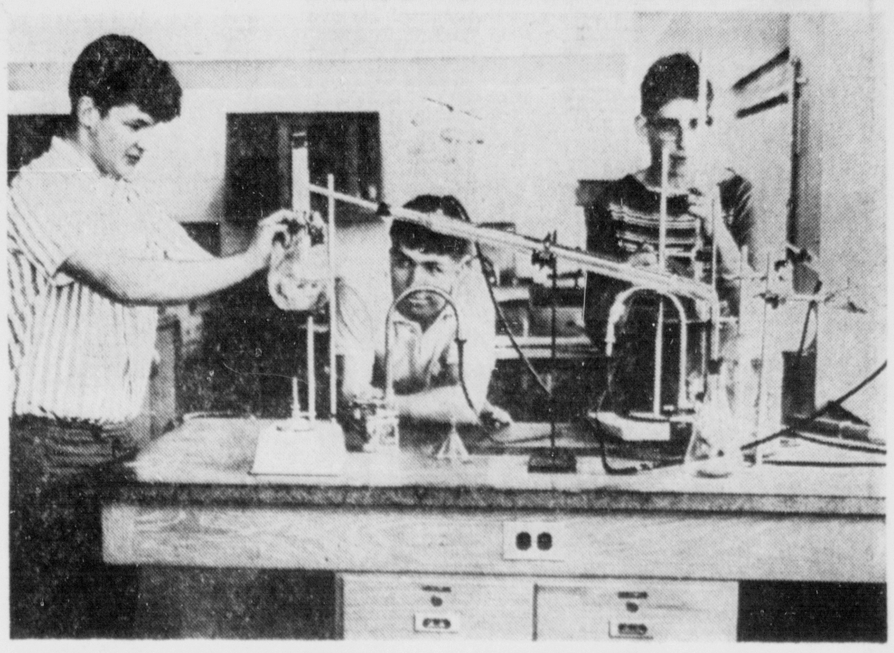
THE BETTER HALF — By Bob Barnes

"They're overpriced...Everyone knows that an alligator needs two pair, and how many alligators have $180 to blow on luxuries?"

CREATING ART — Imagination and persistence — not usually included in intelligence testing — come to the fore in creativity, a new realm for testers.



THE GUY WITH IDEAS is not always the one who tests highest in I.Q. Research in creativity shows that this quality is virtually independent of the intelligence quotient and is best predicted by work children do outside of the schoolroom. (Science Service photos)

College Students I. Q. Controlled

By PATRICIA McBROOM
Science Service

The almighty I.Q. still controls the fate of most college-bound American students, but its strength has been seriously undermined as the study of creativity gains in sophistication.

Those doing the undermining have been studying creativity for the past 15 years; they claim that intelligence beyond a certain minimum level bears little or no relation to creative accomplishment in fields from science to art.

"IT SIMPLY IS not true that the more intelligent person is necessarily the more creative one," says Dr. Donald W. MacKinnon, director of Berkeley's Institute of Personality Assessment and Research at the University of California. A front runner in the creative studies, Dr. MacKinnon's institute has over the years sampled top architects, mathematicians and research scientists, judged for their creativity by colleagues.

"The findings are clear," says Dr. McKinnon. Careers in such demanding fields as architecture, mathematics and scientific research seem to require an I.Q. level approaching 120. Beyond that, he says, intelligence and creative adult work show essentially zero correlations. The less creative men and women studied at Berkeley covered the same I.Q. range — from about 118 to 154 — as their outstanding colleagues.

Another investigator in the field puts the necessary I.Q. minimum below 120 — a level common to college students. Dr. John L. Holland, vice president for research at the American College Testing Programs, says, "If you look at any talented performance, one of the most important traits is persistence." Add to that originality and courage, says Dr. Holland. Yet, "Most psychologists have been acting as if intelligence is the only important thing in the world."

Actually, attempts to set a minimum I.Q. level for creative performance are largely playful quibbling. The Berkeley institute and American College Testing Program are mainly interested in getting across to the academic and intellectual world one central theme: Intelligence bears some relation to creative performance, but explains very little of it.

People have subjective impressions of intelligence which probably cover many talents, including creativity. But in the United States intelligence also has concrete, objective meaning — it is, in fact, the score earned on one or several standard mental tests. A child receiving high scores is called gifted.

Most colleges and universities select their students on the basis of intelligence scores and high school grades. The two are related.

"Academic potential appears to be only one of several relatively independent dimensions of talent," warns Dr. Holland, "and should be used with discrimination rather than as a panacea."

WHAT WILL PREDICT adult achievement, insofar as it can be predicted? Records of extracurricular achievement, says Dr. Holland — perhaps an award in a science fair or debate; excellence in art, music, literature, theater, or leadership, accomplished by the student on his own outside the classroom.

ACT has by now studied half a million students selected through its nationwide testing program, the only one of the nation's three big testing operations to stress records of non-academic work. Results support the Berkeley data: There is weak correlation between intelligence and human performance which is judged by others to be outstanding, or in other words, creative.

IN ONE SENSE, the creativity studies only corroborate what humans know intuitively. Good grades lead to more good grades and creative work leads to more creative work. "It's a case of psychologists catching up with the mothers of the world," says Dr. Holland. But what is less well known is the extent to which intelligence measures are apparently locked into the academic cycle.

The creativity people would like to take some of the pressure off intelligence as the mark of giftedness. In this effort, they have not been too successful.

"Faculty people don't want to believe their grades are not very relevant to creative accomplishment," says Dr. Holland. And those who have been promoting intelligence tests through the years "cannot now say they are not so important."

But in addition, creative human performance is sufficiently complex that, depending on a scientist's definition and analytic methods, the conclusions are quite different.

THE CREATIVE PERSON is marked by a preference for richness and complexity of experience; he likes disorder and asymmetry, apparently because they challenge his drive to impose the most far-reaching and difficult ordering. Possibly because of this greater openness to multiplicity, inner experience and disorder, creative groups are likely to score higher than normal in psychopathology, but have the means to control it.

Crime Prevention Crusade By Federation Of Women's Clubs

MRS. WALTER MAGEE

"In a civilized society it is unthinkable that a woman can not walk on the streets at night without fear," said Mrs. Walter Varney Magee, president of the 11-million-member General Federation of Women's Clubs in her inaugural address in Boston on June 14. "If you make them safe for women they are safe for all."

Mrs. Magee considers crime prevention of paramount importance during her two-year administration. She has appointed Mrs. Margaret Moore, an experienced anti-crime crusader, to head the GFWC Law Observance and Crime Prevention Crusade for Light Division, which places special emphasis on a crusade for adequate street ligthing.

Since 1962, Mrs. Moore has been coordinator of the Indianapolis Anti-Crime Crusade, which was cited in the 1966 report of the President's Crime Commission as an outstanding example of citizen action to alleviate crime.

Organization of the Indianapolis crusade followed public indignation when a 90-year-old retired teacher was fatally injured in front of her apartment by a 15-year-old purse snatcher.

The editor of the Indianapolis News, where Mrs. Moore works in the public relations department, asked her to invite 30 women to a luncheon to get their ideas on combatting crime.

These women were the first members of the Anti-Crime Crusade. Their first project: better lighting. The group later came to include 50,000 women from 2,000 organizations. Their list of projects grew to include such things as court watching, cleaning up neighborhoods, encouraging dropouts to return to school and helping get pay raises for police.

Mrs. Moore attributes success of the group to the fact that they study first, ask public officials how they can help instead of telling them and start with small projects.

"Before we asked City Council to approve money for more street ligting, we compared maps with each street light marked against maps of areas with high crime rates," Mrs. Moore explains. "More crimes occurred in darkened areas."

The committee's activity has resulted in the city installing more than 9,000 new high-powered street lights. Property owners were also urged to examine the adequacy of lighting of such crime-prone sites as apartment house areaways and warehouse docks. As a result, more than 6,000 dusk - to - dawn mercury vapor lights were installed on private property.

According to Mrs. Moore, spot surveys showed some street crimes dropped as much as 84 per cent in areas affected by the lighting campaign.

To see what could be done about dropouts, the Indianapolis group asked school officials for a list of names. Officials were skeptical, but provided an initial list of 28 names. After 26 of these 28 returned to school, skepticism vanished.

The number of dropouts persuaded to return to school now numbers over 2,000.

Another Indianapolis project which has won acclaim from juvenile authorities is educating children on the law as it applies specifically to them. Nearly 66,000 children are visited annually under Crusade auspices by policemen, who explain the law and answer questions.

Mrs. Magee hopes her law observance and crime prevention chairman's enthusiasm and know-how will lead to effective action by other GFWC clubs. Objectives Mrs. Magee hopes to accomplish include: promoting the necessity to provide funds for an adequate number of law enforcement officials, inculcating a respect for those in authority, providing scholarships for policemen to attend law enforcement training programs, conferring with police as to how individuals may protect themselves and their property from criminals and getting police representatives to speak at club meetings.

FOOD FOR A FINCH

Peeper, a four-week-old house finch who is a guest of Mrs. Herbert Raschke of 44 Via Chepparo, Greenbrae, eagerly gulps nourishment offered by his hostess. Hamburger, peaches and bread are Peeper's favorites and Mrs. Raschke serves them on a pair of tweezers. He gets his beverage, pineapple juice, from an eye-dropper. Peeper was rescued by Mrs. Raschke after he fell from his nest. (Independent-Journal photo by Bob Hax)

Novato Panel Backs Plan For New Apartment Units

Plans for a seven-unit apartment building to be constructed on Center Road, west of Diablo Avenue in Novato, were approved for Westwood Homes Inc. by the Novato Plan Review Committee at its regular meeting yesterday according to Warren Baker, acting planning director.

The committee also approved the plans for the Los Robles Mobile Home Park of 301 mobile home spaces on 30 acres north of Bel Marin Keys south of Highway 37. Although this is outside present city limits, it is adjacent and was referred to the city by the Marin County Planning Department, Baker said.

The plans for a 2,950 square foot addition to its existing communications facility at 405 Entrada Drive was approved by the committee for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., according to Baker.

The committee continued, until other plans are submitted, consideration of 52 four-unit townhouses on 25 acres on the west side of Highway 101, south of Scottsdale Boulevard for Glendale Homes.

It recommended against three items to the Novato Planning Commission. They were the request for a sign variance by the Novato Office Equipment Co. for a 10-square-foot sign at 1608 Grant Avenue; a request for a sign variance for a 105-square-foot free-standing sign for Novak Square Shopping Center at Novato Boulevard and Wilson Avenue for William Jonas, and the plans for a restaurant and service station adjacent to the site of the Novato branch of the Marin County Library on Novato Boulevard, west of Tamalpais Avenue for Hoytt Enterprises, Baker said.

Concert Tomorrow In Santa Venetia

A concert of classical works, including selections by Hayden, Bach, Beethoven and Dvorak, will be presented at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church by a group of Marin and San Francisco musicians.

Mario Lopez of Corte Madera, a lyric tenor, will sing opera selections and other songs.

Other musicians appearing will be David and Elsie Kirnitsky of Terra Linda, Lynn Mehlinger of San Francisco, Roy Oakley Jr. of San Rafael, Christopher Brann of Kentfield and Margaret Oakley of San Rafael.

Irate Taxpayers Vs. Commuter Tax

The Irate Taxpayers of Marin passed resolutions Thursday opposing the San Francisco commuter tax and the county gun control ordinance, President Philip Maley said today.

Meeting in Novato, the club also voiced opposition to the proposed county ambulance service to that area and will urge the supervisors to subsidize the existing Novato Ambulance Co., owned by Jack D. Kinney, Maley said.

The next club meeting is set for Sept. 19 at 8 p.m. at Lagunitas School.

Hearing Continued In Burglary Case

Preliminary hearing for two Hamilton Air Force Base men, Hughel Ray Osburn and Howard L. Kliever, for burglary was continued yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to 9 a.m. Aug. 30.

Osburn and Kliever are charged with burgling the home of Kenneth L. Dunn in San Rafael June 24.

Reagan Calls Session; School Aid Pressure

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Pressure mounted on Gov. Ronald Reagan today from fellow Republicans to ask the Legislature to appropriate new aid for schools during a special session he has called for next month.

Specific requests came from State Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty and Assemblyman George W. Milias, R-Gilroy.

Reagan announced yesterday he was calling a special session to consider the two bills passed by the Assembly in its "rump" session the week after acting Gov. Hugh M. Burns adjourned the Legislature under a rarely used constitutional provision.

Reagan said meetings between himself and leaders of both houses of the Legislature will determine what other items will go on the agenda. The lawmakers will be able to consider bills pertaining only to those matters Reagan puts before them.

In another development, Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke of the California State Colleges asked Reagan to reassess his decision to cut $3.39 million in faculty salary increases from the $5.69 billion budget.

The special session will be held at the same time as the week-long meeting of the Legislature starting Sept. 9, required by the constitution for the lawmakers to consider overriding gubernatorial vetoes of bills passed during the regular session.

There also is pressure on the governor to put property tax relief and financial aid for the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District on the special call.

Property tax relief, school aid and BART all were issues over which the Senate and Assembly deadlocked earlier this month, leading to Burns' decision to send the lawmakers home over the protests of Democratic leaders in the Assembly.

Back-To-Back Missile Firings Held A Success

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Two highly destructive multiple-warhead missiles designed to penetrate deep into enemy defenses entered the U.S. nuclear arsenal yesterday with spectacular back-to-back launchings.

The missiles—the Navy's Poseidon, capable of carrying 10 warheads that can be sprayed on preselected targets hundreds of miles apart, and the Air Force's Minuteman 3—were labeled completely successful in maiden test flights from the space complex at Cape Kennedy.

When they become operational, the missiles will replace the Polaris and Minuteman 1 and 2 as the backbone of America's retaliatory force. Both are expected to be placed on operational status in about two years.

South Dakota has strengthened its narcotic laws by making the sentence for conviction of possession not less than two years nor more than five and a fine not to exceed $5,000.

ANNUAL AD WRITING CONTEST WINNER

The following winning ad was submitted by Mrs. Robert Johans of 350 Via La Paz, Greenbrae. Mrs. Johans was presented with a check for $100 for her effort.
"Why don't you come up and see me some time?"
I'm the kind of a house most people find irresistible. The men say I'm REALLY built and the women think I have a lot of personality. I have a huge living room with an Arizona Driftwood stone fireplace that reaches right up to its beautiful beamed ceiling, and you'll love the patio that looks out on Mt. Tam. You can breakfast at the counter of my bright yellow and brick kitchen or luncheon in the nook. I have 2 bathrooms and a utility room. You'll relax in splendor in either of the large bedrooms or be a real TIGER in the den! You can (pardon the expression) tinker in my lovely double garage. I'm completely dressed with wall-to-wall carpets and drapes . . . Darrrling, all the privacy in the world. If YOU like my type . . . just call my (UH) agent for an appointment. $52,950.

Novato Has Only Two Department Heads At Present

Novato now has only two heads to its four departments. They are Police Chief Robert Di Grazia and Parks and Recreation Director Edward W. Adams. Adams.

Planning Director Mark Phillip David was fired in February and his place is being filled temporarily by Asst. Planning Director Warren Baker. Director of Public Works Lawrence A. Coleman resigned as of July 31 and his place is being filled temporarily by Clifford Temps, acting public works director.

The Independent-Journal yesterday incorrectly listed Coleman as being fired and omitted the name of Di Grazia as a department head.

Churchmen Firm; Back Grape Boycott

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Despite opposition, the executive council of the Northern California Council of Churches stands on its table grape boycott resolution.

The resolution, voted July 13 by the council's directors, called on churchmen to support Cesar Chavez and his United Farm Workers Organizing Committee.

In a two and one-half hour meeting yesterday, some 50 laymen, pastors and grape growers urged the council to rescind the resolution backing the table grape sanction.

The executive council voted 8-1 to refer three requests from the Sanger Methodist Church to the church group's full board. The requests included a pullback of the boycott resolution, and that a board meeting be set up in the Fresno area.

Critics of the church stand came to the meeting from valley communities of Selma, Visalia, Porterville, Sanger and Madera.

Golden World Being Forecast For Year 2000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In the year 2000, says researcher Herman Kahn, everybody will be rich and half the population may not work at all.

By that time, Kahn told the Commonwealth Club yesterday, computers "will have transcended mankind."

Kahn, operator of the Hudson Institute, said the third most important event in human history will be a "super-permissive" post-industrial world of the 21st Century.

The first two, he said, were development of agriculture in the Middle East some 10,000 years ago and the Industrial Revolution of the 19th Century.

School Session For Monday Night Off

The regular meeting of the Novato Unified School District board, scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday, has been canceled because of lack of a quorum, according to Deputy Supt. Ralph Giovanniello.

The next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Sept. 3. The regular meeting would fall on Sept. 2, Labor Day.

Civic Center: Above And Beyond

Pope's Pill Ruling Stirs Crisis

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — History records numerous instances when decisions by the papacy have provoked broad repercussions. And sometimes, teaching pronouncements eventually have been changed.

Such cases were being cited by church scholars this week as dissension continued over Pope Paul's encyclical upholding the church's prohibition against contraception.

However, in the present era, no parallels were seen to equal the current wave of controversy among Catholics themselves.

"Seldom, if ever before, has a papal encyclical provoked such a mixture of opinion among Catholics," said the Catholic National Register. The Long Island Catholic called it the "greatest crisis in authority" in modern Church annals.

Despite comparisons with the past, however, circumstances presently were not regarded as offering much prospect for early modification, at least not until other conditions or leadership come about.

"I don't see how the Pope could ever change his views after making a statement as strong as this," says Msgr. Austin Vaughan, of Yonkers, N.Y., president of the American Catholic Theological Society. "It would be easier for the Pope to resign than to change this statement."

The National Catholic Reporter published speculation that the issue might be a factor in the next papal election.

Scholars also noted that at various times in the past, firm papal teachings have ultimately been altered or reversed by later church leaders after the passage of years.

"It is plain that the fallible statements of earlier popes have been refuted in the course of time by the criticism and rejection of the Church," says John T. Noonan, a Catholic law expert of the University of California.

He and others, including Rt. Rev. Msgr. John Tracy Ellis, a noted church historian, cited various examples in which papal pronouncements eventually were reversed, including:

An 1185 ruling by Pope Urban III, in his ban against usury, holding that the charging of interest on loans and credits was immoral—a practice now accepted by church and society as a useful economic measure.

Pope Gregory XVI's 1832 encyclical condemning the idea that everyone is entitled to freedom of conscience as "a delirium" and a "pestilential error" a view strongly rejected by the Second Vatican Council in its declaration on religious freedom and rights of conscience.

A 1302 definition by Pope Boniface VIII that "it is entirely necessary for salvation that every human creature be subject to the Roman pontiff"—a view long since repudiated by the Church, most recently by the Second Vatican Council's decree on ecumenism.

Several other cases also were mentioned. Rev. Gregory Baum, of the University of Toronto, has pointed out that Pope Honorius I was condemned by a church council for teaching heretical doctrine.

Writing in the Journal of Ecumenical Studies, Father Baum said that a "myth or legend of the papacy" has occasionally been fostered, suggesting that ordinary teaching documents of the Pope are infallible.

He says such a view is unfounded.

The church, since its early years, has opposed contraception, a conviction that arose when populations were sparse and infant mortality high. The Vatican pointed out that Pope Paul's reiteration of the teaching was not specified as being infallible.

Only about 1930 did Protestant churches begin reassessing their own views on birth control, beginning with the Anglican (Episcopal) communion. Most Protestant bodies have since voiced approval of birth control.

As for other papal pronouncements that have caused sharp reactions, they usually have been in the far past, and involved resistance from quarters already in dispute with the Church over its teachings.

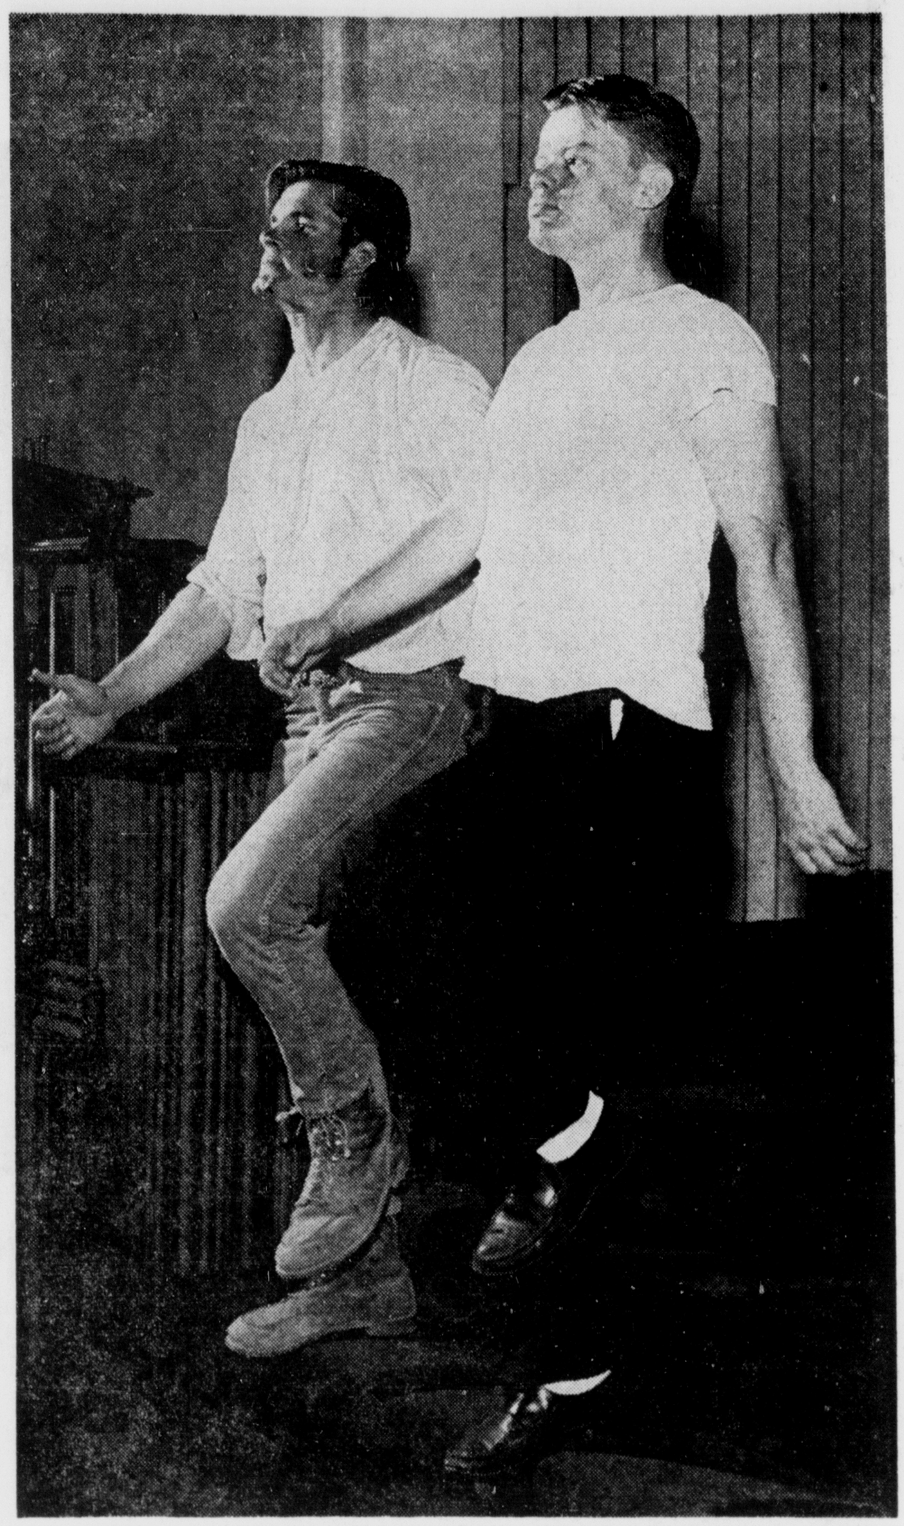
Such was the case when the Pope excommunicated the 16th Century German reformer, Martin Luther, a conflict which led to the Protestant Reformation.

Similar action in the 11th century against the Patriarch of Constantinople, in a conflict over papal authority and part of the Nicene Creed, marked the split between Rome and Eastern Orthodox Christians.

The mutual anathemas pronounced then were revoked in 1965 by Pope Paul and Patriarch Athenagoras I.

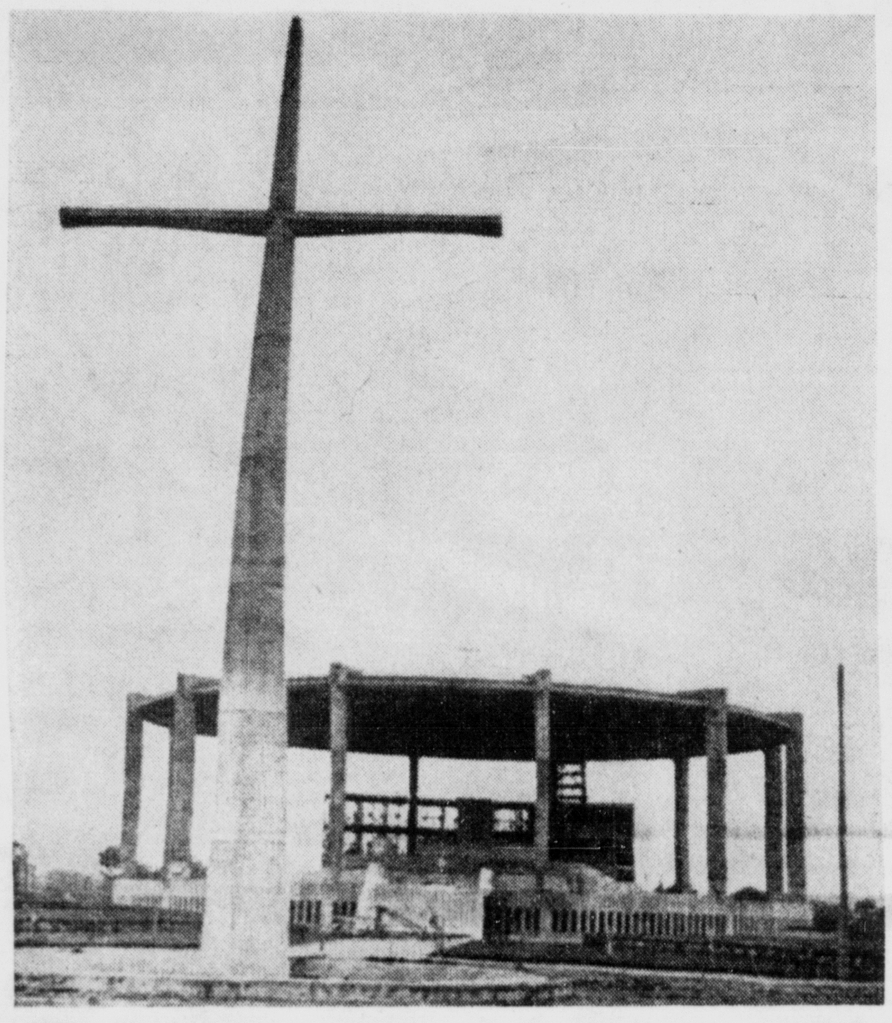
Other church decrees have sometimes produced wide religious and political reactions, mostly in modern times, from Protestants rather than Catholics.

However, Protestants have been more restrained in reactions to the recent papal declaration, generally reflecting disappointment. An American Baptist, Rev. Dr. Stanley I. Stuber, said the ensuing conflict may spur a "second phase" of church renewal, going beyond pastoral and liturgical matters to deal with moral and theological issues such as papal authority.



TO DRAMATIZE SERMON

Members of the Methodist Actors Service the Church, a Bay Area organization, will present "Even the Hater," a dramatic sermon at the 9 a.m. service tomorrow at the Aldersgate United Methodist Church Nova Albion Way and Montecillo Road, San Rafael. The drama is a Cain and Abel type conflict between brothers and the effect of love as understood in the New Testament. Taking the parts of the brothers will be Tom Van Buren (left) and John Phillips. The public is cordially invited, Rev. Clyde Vaughn, pastor, has announced.



SCENE OF SERVICES — Finishing tocuhes are being made on the canopied structure which will serve for religious services during Pope Paul's visit to Bogota, Colombia next week. Called the "templete," it is situated in the midst of the huge World Eucharist Congress grounds. (AP Wirephoto).

ARRIVES THURSDAY

Bogota To Shine For Papal Visit

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — "Bogota isn't ugly. All it needs is a bit of makeup.

With that thought in mind and an eye out for the approaching visit of Pope Paul VI, city fathers are pushing a multimillion-dollar face lifting that has given this gray, chilly, 8,600-foot high capital a sparkle it probably has never known in its 430 years.

(Dr. Juan Bueno Medina, who has resided in San Rafael for the past one-and-one-half years, is currently in Bogota as an observer of the Catholic congress and the visit by Pope Paul.

In several special dispatches to the Independent-Journal, the retired college professor who taught in Bogota for a number of years, reports the Colombian city is decked out in splendor for the historic visit and that there is little else discussed than the pending arrival of the papal delegation.

Following the closing of the congress and a visit with friends Dr. Medina is expected back in Marin.)

Caught up in the spirit of things, homeowners are painting their house fronts, trimming gardens and trees. Businessmen are tidying up their establishments. The grime of years is being removed from the aging fronts of the National Cathedral, the Municipal Palace and the Capitol.

Streets are being cleared of prostitutes, pickpockets and beggars. Police are everywhere and a legion of traffic officers is making it possible for people to walk — not dash desperately — at pedestrian crossings.

About the only thing no one seems to be trying to brighten is Bogata's weather, usually drizzly, cloudy and chilly. No one seems to recall the temperature ever exceeding 72 degrees. Most of the time it feels like 45 or 50.

Newspapers and radio stations do not carry weather information or forecasts.

Many of the public works projects—new sewage and lighting systems and expressways — now completed or under way had been in the planning stage for several years. They were accelerated by the selection of Bogota for two important religious meetings, an International Eucharistic Congress and the conference of the Latin American Episcopal Council, and finally by the definite news that the Pope would be a visitor next Thursday for three days.

Estimates of the cost of the papal visit alone, exclusive of the public works programs, range as high as $10 million in new installations and preparations. The city and national governments, as well as the Catholic Church, are financing it.

One of the most impressive of the installations is the Eucharistic Congress grounds embracing some 60 acres where the Pope will address perhaps 750,000 persons. This is the standing and seating capacity of an area centering on a canopied structure that will serve for religious services during the congress.

A force of 14,000 police and troops will be deployed throughout the city for the Pope's security.

New Pastor Will Be Installed Tomorrow

Rev. Kenneth W. Behnken will be installed as pastor of Peace Lutheran Church of Mill Valley at 3 p.m. tomorrow.

The installation will mark the end of a three-month vacancy in the pastoral office following the resignation of Rev. Harold Johnson, who has entered the field of Christian work with the handicapped.

Rites of installation will be conducted by Rev. Herman H. Hauer and Rev. Roland E. Grumm will preach the sermon.

Reverend Behnken comes to Mill Valley from Great Bend, Kan., where he served as pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church for the past four years. The 40-year-old pastor held previous posts in Seattle, Wash., and Lakewood, Los Angeles County.

The new pastor will be Peace Lutheran's third since the church was organized in 1951. The church's original pastor was Rev. Robert Menzel.

Prior to Reverend Behnken's appointment, Rev. Harold Engelbrech of Piedmont was the interim pastor.

Reverent Behnken and his wife, Eunice, are the parents of three daughters, Sandra, 13; Susan, 11, and Amy, 5.

Sunday services at the church, Shoreline Highway at Tennessee Valley Road, are 8:30 and 11 a.m. with church school at 9:45 a.m.

REV. KENNETH W. BEHNKEN
New pastor

Three Special Visitors Will Attend School

Three American Indian girls from two California-located tribes have arrived in Novato for one-week vacation bible school which will begin Monday at the Bethel Baptist Church in Novato.

The program, "Homes Open Please" is under sponsorship of the American Baptist Church of Northern California, Inc.

The three children arrived last Saturday and will attend the school beginning Monday. They were brought to Novato a week early so that they could become accustomed to the families with whom they will live. They will return to their homes on Aug. 24.

Two came from the Pomo Tribe near Lakeport and one from the Mono Tribe east of the Sierra.

Lorna Mae Torres, 9, is staying with T/Sgt. and Mrs. Gordon Potter at 283 Bolling Drive, Hamilton Air Force Base.

Cherene Mota, 10, is staying with the William Crowell family at 1299 Parkwood Drive, Novato.

Split Between PGA, Players Becomes Complete

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — The split between the Professional Golfers Association and the touring pros apparently is final.

The Executive Committee of the PGA, at a special meeting yesterday, abolished the PGA Tournament Committee and announced it had assumed complete control of the tour "for all time."

Gardner Dickinson, Jack Nicklaus, Frank Beard and Doug Ford were player members of the tournament committee. They are among the rebel players who have set up a rival organization to conduct a tour of their own, starting next year.

There was no immediate comment from Dickinson or Nicklaus at Harrison, N.Y., where they are competing in the $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic. There was none, either, from Sam Gates, attorney for the rival organization tentatively called the International Professional Golfers Association.

Max Elbin, PGA president, said the tournament committee was abolished because of the players' rejection of any chance of compromise.

Elbin said the players had demanded "full and complete authority over the tour" and refused to submit the question to arbitration.

"The PGA could never accept this demand," Elbin asserted. "The notion of a PGA tour in which the PGA has no voice is an impossibility if the public interest is to be protected."

Joe Black of Dallas will take over as tournament manager, Elbin said, "no later than the start of the Thunderbird Classic, Aug. 29 in Clifton, N.J." He said the present PGA field staff and television representatives will be retained.

The PGA president declared a new tournament committee will be appointed shortly and will include player representatives.

"In view of the actions of the player members of the tournament committee terminating any efforts to compromise through the existing structure," Elbin said in a statement, "the executive committee had no alternative but to assume responsibilities for the tour.

"Inasmuch as some tournament players have indicated considerable confusion over the course of recent events, the PGA will shortly send a letter to each of the present tournament players advising them of the purpose and effects of our decision and informing them that they will be given an opportunity to continue with the PGA on a long-range basis."

Elbin declined to elaborate, but this seemed to be a reference to his Thursday statement in Washington. He said then that he would ask the Executive Committee for permission to poll each player and "ask him whether he is a PGA member or a member of the other group."

Elbin also said the Executive Committee "has decided to arrange for more vigorous consultation between the PGA and sponsors and will invite them to designate one of their members to serve on the new tournament committee."

Giants Battling For 2nd

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The San Francisco Giants hope to gain sole possession of second place in the National League today but will need the help of the Cincinnati Reds.

High-kicking Juan Marichal, the league's top winner with a 21-5 record, will work for the Giants today against Philadelphia's Rick Wise, who is 8-9. If Juan can beat the Phillies and the Reds knock off the Chicago Cubs, the Giants will hold down the second spot by themselves.

TIGHT RACE

The high-flying St. Louis Cardinals, of course, are running away with the senior loop flag with a 14½ game bulge over their nearest rival. But an interesting battle has developed for runner-up honors with the Giants, Cubs, Reds and Atlanta Braves separated by only one game.

Ron Hunt rapped a two-run single in the ninth inning yesterday to climax a three-run rally that gave the Giants a 7-5 victory over the Phils.

NOT NEAT

It wasn't the neatest way to post a win as the last ditch uprising started with a bad-hop infield single by pinchhitter Dave Marshall and a throwing error by Roberto Pena. A forceout accounted for one run and Bobby Bonds' single set the stage for Hunt's blow.

The runs came off reliever Gary Wagner and ended a string of 19 2-3 scoreless innings by the tall Philadelphia right-hander.

Stengel Gift At Old-Timer A's Game

But that's one of the gifts the famed retired baseball manager will receive on Casey Stengel Day at the park of the Oakland A's Sunday.

The day, promoted by owner Charles Finley of the A's, marks Stengel's 44th wedding anniversary and the 20th anniversary of the day Casey won a Pacific Coast League title as manager of the Oakland Oaks.

The silver bowl, donated by the American League for Casey's contributions to baseball, was included among presents carried by Finley, a Chicago insurance executive, on a flight to Oakland Friday.

Other gifts were a pair of ruby-encrusted gold cuff links from Finley and a gold bracelet inlaid with 24 rubies, a gift from Mrs. Finley to Mrs. Edna Stengel.

Prior to the Yankee-A's game Sunday, the 1948 Oakland Oaks will play a three-inning exhibition with the 1948 San Francisco Seals, honoring the 78-year-old Stengel.

"It took three weeks to round up those old-timers from all over the country," said Finley.

Aging Santana Gives Spain 1-1 Davis Cup Tie With U.S.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Manuel Santana, a national hero in his native Spain, is that type of athlete who has made father time give up.

On the far side of 30, the trim tennis super-star who is regarded by many as the world's best amateur player, is debunking over-the-hill theorists.

Santana holds Spain's hope of upsetting the United States in the Davis Cup Inter-Zone finals. He did his part yesterday in absorbing Clark Graebner's power shots and turning them into a three-set victory with hair-trigger reactions.

The match smacked of revenge because Graebner had defeated Santana in straight sets in the third round at Wimbledon last month.

After the Spaniard had put his country ahead, the United States came back to tie it 1-1 on a tremendous display of power shots and finesse by Arthur Ashe. He easily disposed of Juan Gisbert in straight sets.

The doubles competition is today on the hard surfaced Clark Courts. Each country demurred from naming their tandems until the last minute.

The doubles winner will put its country ahead 2-1 on points. This will lead to the showdown tomorrow when Graebner, trying to recoup before hometown fans, goes against Gisbert in opening singles and Ashe faces Santana in the finale.

Santana was regarded a cinch to play in today's doubles as he continues his iron man chore for Spain.

The steady Spaniard won at Wimbledon in 1966 and at Forest Hills in the Nationals in 1965. He is serving his 11th hitch with Spain's Davis Cuppers and twice, in 1965 and 1967, he drove his country's colors to the Davis Cup finals in Australia, where the cup remained.

So great a national figure is Santana, that Generalissimo Franco has decorated the master of touch, spin and tactics for his tennis exploits. After polishing off Graebner 6-2, 6-3, 6-3 yesterday Santana faced newsmen with a grin.

"Some of you may say I'm over the hill because of age," he said. "But I want you to know that I think there are many hills. Beating Clark in three sets in this heat and humidity was a break for me. It helped me conserve myself. I didn't get real tired. I think I played my best match of the year against him. I am very ready to do my best for Spain."

Champion Celts Sold To Ballantine Brewery

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, National Basketball Association champions in nine of the last 10 seasons, have been sold to P. Ballantine & Sons Brewery of Newark, N.J., for a reported $3.5 million.

Officials of the new owners, who emphasized that they planned to keep the team in Boston, would say only that the purchase price was "in excess of $3 million."

They also said Red Auerbach will remain as executive vice president and general manager, and that player-coach Bill Russell, yet to sign his contract, is being counted upon to operate in the same capacity.

The transaction was consummated yesterday with National Equities Inc., holding company which owned the Celtics.

Marvin Kratter, chairman of the board of National Equities and the outgoing president of the Celtics, said the sale still had to be approved by the NBA Board of Governors and is on the agenda for the board's meeting Aug. 22.

It is the second sale in three years for the Celtics, acquired by Kratter's organization in 1965.

Kratter said National Equities Inc., was in the process of being acquired by Levin-Townsend Computer Co., which wanted the Celtics disposed of. He said he started looking around for a potential buyer, and at the same time Waldron became interested on behalf of Ballantine.

Returning as president in the new setup will be Jack Waldron, who held the post previously and is now a senior vice president of Ballantine.

Nolan's 49ers Looking For Exhibition Victory

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Forty Niners, who seem to be adjusting to new coach Dick Nolan's system faster than most expected, shoot for their first exhibition victory of the year tomorrow when they host the Cleveland Browns at Kezar Stadium.

The Forty Niners were routed in their first exhibition game — 30-18 by the San Diego Chargers —but showed considerable improvement a week ago while bowing to the Dallas Cowboys, 16-14.

Now, Nolan expects his team to start showing the kind of form that can carry it through the regular season.

The Browns, Century Division champions a year ago, lost their only exhibition —to the Los Angeles Rams, 23-21. They bring the NFL's best running attack into Kezar, a ground game featuring Leroy Kelly, who led the league with 1,205 yards last year.

Nolan has indicated he will stick to his pre-season timetable, which means he'll use all or most of his players — rookies and veterans alike — in the Cleveland game.

George Mira, who played the second half in the Dallas game, will start at quarterback with John Brodie and Steve Spurrier standing by to relieve him.

Kickoff is set for 1 p.m. and a crowd of 35,000 is anticipated.

Give-Up McDaniel Ruins A's

OAKLAND (AP)—Lindy McDaniel, who says he was the San Francisco Giants' "give-up" pitcher — tossed only into hopelessly lost games early this season—is fast becoming the relief ace of the New York Yankees.

McDaniel recorded his sixth save as he shut out the Oakland Athletics for 2⅔ innings last night to preserve a 2-1 victory for New York.

McDaniel's toughest time came in the eighth inning when Oakland had runners on first and third with one out. He got pinch-hitter John Donaldson to ground into a forceout, then walked catcher Jim Pagliaroni to load the bases.

That brought up left-handed hitting Rick Monday.

Yankee Manager Ralph Houk first considered bringing in left-handed reliever Steve Hamilton, then decided to stick with McDaniel.

"You can second guess yourself but I figured that Monday probably hasn't seen a fork ball like McDaniel throws," Houk said.

But McDaniel didn't use the fork ball to get Monday. He tried it once and missed the plate. Six straight fastballs later, Monday was a strikeout victim.

McDaniel said after the victory, "I like to pitch in games that mean something. The Giants used me as a give-up pitcher when they were four or five runs behind. I never pitched in a game this season that meant anything for the Giants."

McDaniel preserved the victory for Al Downing, making his first start after spending a month in the minor leagues trying to get over a sore arm. Houk said Downing, 1-1, pitched well enough to earn another start.

Rookie Feels Sad After Golf Lead

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Murphy, a rookie on the tour and yet to win a pro tournament, held a two-stroke lead going into today's third round of the $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic—but he wasn't happy.

"I'm a little disappointed," he said after posting a three-under-par 69 for 133. His round included a double bogey six on his 17th hole and that's the one that had him bothered.

"I had a good round going, and then I take a double bogey," he said. "It shouldn't happen.

"We play for par and let the birdies fall where they may. Sometimes a bad shot will cost you a bogey. But you should never, never have a double bogey," said the brash Floridian who led the first day with a 64.

As it was, his 11-under-par total had him two strokes ahead of a menacing field of five locked at 135—PGA champ Julius Boros, 65; Dale Douglass who says a new-found putting secret helped him to a 65; defending champion Jack Nicklaus, 68; long-hitting Dan Sikes, 68; and Rivers McBee, who had two eagles en route to a 66.

Behind them at 136 are Orville Moody, 67; Australian Bruce Crampton, 68; Don Bies, 66; veteran Art Wall, 70; and former PGA champ Bobby Nichols, 68.

A BEATING

The tight little Westchester Country Club course, 6,648 yards long with a par 72, took such a terrible beating from the elite field seeking the $50,000 first prize, that it took a score of 144—even par—to make the cut for the last two rounds today and tomorrow. Seventy-nine it.

Jacky Cupit, who had a 63 with nine birdies and a bogey, headed a quartet at 137.

Cupit, Douglass, Boros, Moody and Crampton shot their rounds in the morning. Scores generally were a little higher in the afternoon.

"It'll level out," said Sikes, who played in the afternoon. "The leaders all will be playing late."

Murphy got his double bogey on the 436 yard, par 4 eighth—his 17th. He hit his tee shot into "what looked like an old divot and was short with my second shot."

RALLIED

He was on in three, about eight feet away, and three-putted.

But he rallied with a birdie on the final hole, reaching the par 5 in two and two-putting.

"No, the double bogey didn't upset me. It disappointed me," the red-haired 25-year-old said. "But if I lose this tournament by one stroke I'm going to be upset."

The 48-year-old Boros, plagued by a backache in the opening round, said he'd taken some pain killers "and wasn't bothered a bit."

Nicklaus said he was "not playing too badly, but not as well as I'd like to." He had six birdies and two bogeys in his round.

GLOOMY LEADER — Rookie Bob Murphy appears dejected at the ninth tee after a double bogey, but all is not lost. He leads the Westchester Classic by two strokes. (UPI Telephoto)

It's A Charmed Day For Lanky Carol Mann

ST. LOUIS (AP) — On her first tee shot Carol Mann hooked the ball into a clump of trees. The ball kicked right out into the center of the fairway.

"I knew right then it was going to be my day," the 6-foot-3 inch Buffalo, N.Y. native laughed.

It was.

The blonde-haired amazon fired a par 69 on the Norwood Hills Country Club course yesterday for a one-stroke lead in the $16,000 Holiday Inn Invitational Ladies Professional Golf Tournament.

And even when Sandra Haynie had a chance for a tie on the 18th hole, Carol still had the charm of the day working. Miss Haynie's 10-foot putt fell six inches short of the hole. That left Miss Haynie tied with three others at 70.

Carol had already finished and wasn't even concerned enough to watch Miss Haynie putt. She saw it all right, but only by accident.

"I stood there to hug an acquaintance of mine," Carol laughed. "I like to hug him because he's big enough to hug and all you other men are so small. But I saw her miss the putt."

The others tied at 70 at the end of the first round were Judy Kimball, Peggy Wilson and Marilynn Smith. Miss Kimball actually came up with the hottest nine holes in the first day. She charged down the back nine with a 33 after shooting a 37 going in.

Miss Smith was tied with Miss Mann at the halfway mark. But she, like Misses Wilson and Kimball, took a bogey on the 15th hole and lost par.

Carol, leading money winner on the tour this year, has her eye on something else besides the $2,400 in first prize money.

"This was my 13th round in the 60's this year and the record is 14 (held by Mickey Wright who shot a 74 Friday). I'm only one away and it's a goal I've set for myself," Carol said. "If you talk about it, you feel you'll put bad luck on yourself. But, my lord, I have the whole season left, so . . ."

DOWN AND OUT — St. Louis Cardinal Dick Schofield hits the deck getting out of the way of a wild pitch by Atlanta's Milt Pappas. (UPI Telephoto)

Bowler Pappas Finally Knocks Down Pesky Cards

Milt Pappas, whose hobby is bowling, finally knocked the pins out from under the St. Louis Cardinals, but it took relief by Claude Raymond to spare him from ninth-inning grief.

Pappas, now in his third National League season had an 0-5 record against the Cardinals before finally turning the tables on them last night in Atlanta's 5-1 victory.

The big right-hander held the Cards to two hits going into the ninth when he ran into trouble. Then with two on and two out, Raymond came on to get Johnny Edwards and nail down Pappas' ninth victory against nine losses.

San Francisco topped Philadelphia 7-5, Pittsburgh trounced Los Angeles 8-4, Cincinnati clubbed the Chicago Cubs 11-7 and Houston outlasted the New York Mets 3-1 in 12 innings in other National League action.

Pappas, who pitched nine years in the American League with Baltimore, got all the offensive help he needed when Joe Torre slammed a three-run homer in the fifth.

St. Louis got its run in the fourth when Curt Flood reached base on an error, stole second and scored on Orlando Cepeda's single.

A three-run fifth inning gave Los Angeles a 7-3 lead over Pittsburgh and set up Don Drysdale's 14th victory. A walk, four singles—one by Drysdale—and an error produced the three runs.

Drysdale, who has lost 10, was relieved by Jim Brewer in the eighth, and Brewer gave way to John Billingham in the ninth with a run in, two on and none out. Billingham put down the threat.

The two-run homer turned out to be Cincinnati's big weapon against Chicago. Pitcher Jim Maloney, Mack Jones, Fred Whitfield and Leo Cardenas each hit a two-run shot. The Cubs got two-run homers from Randy Hundley and Ernie Banks.

Bob Aspromonte's two-out, two-run double in the 12th gave Houston its victory in a game twice delayed by rain, the second time, between the top and bottom of the 11th, for one hour and three minutes.

Houston had tied the score with Jim Wynn's two-out homer in the ninth. J. C. Martin's first homer of the season in the seventh inning gave the Mets a 1-0 lead.

Southall Good, But No Cigar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Terry Southall won the game for the Baltimore Colts but he hasn't won a job.

The taxi squad quarterback from Baylor hit three straight passes for 66 yards in a last-minute push to set up Lou Michael's field goal for a 15-13 victory over the Washington Redskins in a National Football League preseason test last night.

Southall won praise from all-pro Johnny Unitas for the clutch drive that resembled the familiar heroics of the Colt master passer, but Coach Don Shula said the question of a backup quarterback to Unitas this season is still up in the air.

"It's like this," Shula said, flipping his hand, one side up, then the other. He shrugged, "we might even trade for a quarterback."

Southall, cut from the squad a year ago, got the opportunity to play the second half in relief of Unitas because of an injury that has sidelined Bob Ward, last year's Colt reserve passer, until mid-September.

TAKES OVER

With a minute and a half left and the Colts trailing by one point, Southall took over on his own 19-yard line and hit successive passes of 13 and 20 yards to Jimmy Orr and Don Alley, then arched a 33-yard throw to Orr to move Baltimore in range for Michaels' kick.

Orr made the catch over his shoulder, with his back to Southall, leaning so far backwards he almost fell.

Southall said, "It appeared Orr didn't have his guy beat. I was trying to keep the ball outside so he could get to it. The guy was real close to him and it was 50-50. But Jimmy just pulled a great move and came back and got the ball."

Unitas said of Southall, "I think he did pretty good under pressure. It's just a matter of getting some playing experience and he'll do real well."

Shula added, "I was happy to see Southall move the club when he had to move them."

The Redskins had squeezed in front 13-12 with only 4:37 to go on a four-yard touchdown flip from Jim Ninowski to Charley Taylor. Joe Rutgens set up the drive by recovering the third fumble lost by Baltimore.

Charlie Gogolak booted two Washington field goals before Baltimore could run a play, hitting the second after a Colt fumble on the kickoff. But the Colts rallied for a 9-6 halftime lead on a safety and a short touchdown dive by Jim Welch after Unitas rifled a 41-yard pass to the Redskins' two-yard line.

Michaels kicked the first of his two field goals from the 20 in the third period before his game-winning shot.

The victory was the 17th straight for the Colts over the rival Redskins in regular and preseason games dating back to 1959.

Heisman Trophy winner Gary Beban of UCLA played a little more than two minutes in his pro debut for the Redskins, missing two passes and getting tossed for a loss once.

AL ROUNDUP

Perfect Groove For (25) McLain

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

As last year's Cy Young Award winner and the latest victim of Denny McLain, Jim Lonborg knows what it's like when everything goes right—and wrong.

"He's in a fantastic groove," said Lonborg after he and Boston lost to McLain and Detroit 4-0 last night. "Once you get in a groove like that, everything seems to go right."

The Detroit right-hander showed what Lonborg meant in the sixth inning when Lonborg beat out a hit, Mike Andrews singled and the runners reached second and third with none out on a wild pickoff attempt. McLain, leading only 2-0 at the time, coolly struck out Dalton Jones, Carl Yastrzemski and Ken Harrelson to get out of the jam, and the game was his.

Last year, Lonborg was performing such feats en route to a 22-9 record that sent the Red Sox to the pennant.

Now it's McLain's year. The victory was his seventh straight and 25th of the season, and widened Detroit's first place lead to eight games over Baltimore, which dropped before Minnesota 5-2.

In other games, Lou Johnson's bases loaded hit in the 12th lifted Cleveland by the Chicago White Sox 4-3, Roy White's run-scoring double in the sixth inning sent the New York Yankees past Oakland 2-1 and Washington scored four unearned runs for a 4-2 victory over California.

McLain, who has lost only three times and is an incredible 16-0 on the road, is fast closing in on the coveted 30-victory season last accomplished in the major leagues by Dizzy Dean in 1934. Dean did not win his 25th game that year until Sept. 10.

Hurling his 22nd complete game and sixth shutout, this year's Cy Young Award shoo-in yielded seven hits, struck out nine and walked one.

Lonborg also pitched well, but this is 1968, not 1967. He gave only two hits in seven innings, but they were Dick McAuliffe's double and Al Kaline's seventh homer in the third inning.

Lonborg also hit Bill Freehan three times, enabling the Tigers' catcher to tie the major league record.

Lonborg, set back first by a skiing accident during the off-season and then by injuries, thus fell to 3-4. His relievers allowed the other two runs in the eighth when McAuliffe tripled and scored on a wild pitch and Norm Cash singled in a run.

WATER SKIING—VI

How To Cross That Wake

(Sixth of 12 lessons)

By WILLIAM D. CLIFFORD
Executive Manager, American Water Ski Association

Crossing the wake and swinging wide to ski in calm water are maneuvers that thrill the beginning skier almost as much as his first successful attempt to get up on skis. To turn, a skier simply leans in the direction he wishes to go and his skis bank in that direction. However, leaving the wake of the towboat requires more than just a turn. The skier must "quarter" into the rough edge of the wake, in much the same manner that a good skipper maneuvers his boat into rough waves. The skier should swing as far as possible toward the opposite side of the wake, then come back across at as sharp an angle as possible. In returning to the wake, the angle of approach should be even sharper to avoid an upset.

Injury-Plagued Gridders Back For All-Star Battle

(Fifth in a series previewing North-South football all-stars who will play Thursday.)

Two top-flight players whom injury knocked out of action early last year will get a chance to show their talents when they square off on opposite lines as guards in the North-South Marin County Kiwanis football all-star classic at College of Marin stadium Thursday.

Al Logan of Drake, sidelined by an ankle injury, saw little action last year but even before the season started he was considered one of the top guards in the Marin County Athletic League The Pirate star weighs in at 198 pounds and is University of California-bound.

Mark "Red" Stephens of San Rafael was also plagued by injuries last year, but saw heavy duty in the latter part of the season at guard and various other positions, enough to gain honorable mention honors and the title of San Rafael High's most inspirational player

Candidate As Philosopher; Politician As Candidate

Campaign oratory seldom produces gems of wisdom. While it may move the throng to applause, it rarely provides much food for thought.

However, some things that Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy said in a recent speech before the Fellowship of Reconciliation of Greater New York are worth deep consideration, quite apart from the fact that the gentleman from Minnesota aspires to be President.

Discussing what he called "the computerized man," the senator-philosopher told his audience:

"WE HAVE BEGUN to accept the principle that one ought to do what is technically possible to do. If it is possible to travel to the moon, we ought to do so, even at the expense of many unfulfilled needs here on earth. If it is possible to build even more destructive weapons, we ought to do so, even though they threaten to destroy us and the whole human race eventually."

He asked, "What becomes of man in this process?" And he answered his own question: "Totally concerned with production or with the sale and consumption of things, he becomes more and more like a thing himself. He tends to become a total consumer, engaged in the passive taking in of everything from cigarettes, to liquor to television to movies and even lectures on books and poetry. . .

"Under these circumstances any person must begin to feel lonely and anxious, because it becomes increasingly difficult to see the real meaning of life beyond simply that of making a living."

SUCH ANXIETY, he suggested, lies behind the trend to destructiveness and violence. And to reverse that trend requires getting at the anxiety behind it. This, he asserted, "ultimately demands the creation of a new mood in our nation: a mood of hope and love for life rather than of hopelessness and attraction to the mechanical and lifeless."

He continued: "I am not speaking of an ideal without basis in the minds of the American people. There may be some, perhaps millions of Americans, who are resigned to the role of being automatons. But I believe that in most of us — the great majority — there is still an awareness, explicity or dimly, of the danger of dehumanization and depersonalization, inherent in a further growth of a dependent society, of a consumer society."

AT THIS POINT, the philosopher triumphed and the politician vanished completely, for Senator McCarthy declined to offer an expansive, highblown "formula" for immediately achieving the new mood. He offered some suggestions: end the war in Vietnam, "undertake to change the kind of bureaucratic control which is becoming more and more dominant in this country." But, he said:

"What matters is that we change directions. . . Whether we go 10 miles or 100 miles in this first year is not so important as that we make the turn and begin to move."

And he concluded with the plea that we "take a chance on hope."

IN THE MEANTIME, McCarthy's fellow Minnesotan, Hubert H. Humphrey, was taking as little chance as possible on his own hope for the presidential nomination. And not long after McCarthy made this speech, Humphrey claimed he is assured the necessary majority of delegates to the Democratic national convention.

Philosophy has little to do with getting nominated for President of the United States. That is strictly a matter of politics.

Brickbat And Bouquet

BRICKBAT to the Novato City Council for introducing an ordinance changing the terms of members of city commissions so that all will expire after each council election, giving new councilmen a free hand to appoint their friends or supporters. This smacks of "spoils politics" at its meanest. It is reminsicent of the purge of county commissions engineered a few years back by a couple of county supervisors to oust supporters of defeated candidates from the non-paid jobs to which they gave their time in the spirit of public service.

But BOUQUETS to the Novato organizations and citizens and to the contractors who combined their efforts today to put Pioneer Memorial Park into shape for use. This devotion to the good of the city stands in contrast to the council's action regarding commission terms.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

HE CARED ENOUGH TO DO SOMETHING

An electrician in Cincinnati was moved by concern over last summer's disturbances to take effective action.

He donated his time and teaching ability to training others. With the help of neighborhood service agencies he recruited 35 interested men, mostly unemployed Negroes. Then he found a classroom in a public library and began his course.

Using home-made slides made from borrowed charts and diagrams, he taught the course himself.

"If there are three or four guys whose life is a little better as a result of my classes," he explained. "I will feel that I have accomplished something."

Constructive efforts that enable individuals to become contributing members of society may not be dramatic. But they constitute our best hope, under God, for overcoming the problems in which we are all involved.

Each of us should ask ourselves how we are fulfilling our debt to God and humanity in this regard.

"Let us not love in word or speech but in deed and in truth." (1 John 3:18)

Alert me, Jesus, to the needs of my neighbor and impel me to do something to relieve human want.

San Franciscan Urges Boycott

San Francisco Mayor Alioto pulled one big boo-boo in the establishment of a one per cent tax on commuters. This can become a two-way street that in the end can result in more harm to San Francisco than good. Every surrounding county should retaliate in kind plus a purchasing boycott of S.F. merchants who they have been helping to survive for years.

The only money commuters should spend in S.F. is for transportation. They should bring their lunch and not spend one other dime in the City of San Francisco. It is about time that our officials realize that people are more important than money, and that they cannot institute laws and taxes on a given moment because they are lousy bookkeepers and can't balance the budget.

No Missile System Totally Protects

Anne Bardwell's I-J article about the ABM Sentinel system, "Marin Conservationists Prepare Missile Site Battle," contains a serious factual error when she says:

"The Bay Area base would be one of many carefully located throughout the country to provide total protection against enemy attack."

There is no system in being, or even contemplated, that can provide such "total protection." The point has been made crystal clean by former Secretary of Defense McNamara, by many U.S senators who have attempted to block passage of the ABM program (largely because of its military weaknesses) and by the Federation of American Scientists in arguing against this proposed Sentinel system. Even our military cannot, and do not, claim that total protection is possible.

No nation today can provide complete defense against nuclear attack, no matter how hard it tries. This is a point which our Chamber of Commerce worriers (warriors?) might try to remember as they attempt to bring this "clean, light industry" (even when light, nuclear fallout is dirty) to Marin.

Actually, the whole project (expected to cost many times the announced figure of $5 billion) is a boondoggle for certain defense industries and represents one of the most shameful results of the power of the military-industrial complex, now riding high, about which Eisenhower warned us.

Reason Behind Golf Cart Change

The person who wrote the piece on page 4 of the Wednesday, Aug. 14, edition of the I-J, "Cart Before the Club, Golfers Go To Court Against New Policies" impressed several of us "haves" as being, to say the least, unsympathetic and to some extent, uninformed.

To put things in their proper perspective one should consider the fact that the average home owner and golf cart owner (if there is such a thing as an average case) probably paid $50,000 for his home, $1,500 for his "go cart" plus $1,000 for his membership in the Marin Country Club and is at present paying $40 per month as dues. When you add to these items the fact that the "average home owner" is saddled with city and county taxes of around $100 per month, it may be realized why the arbitrary imposition of $180 per year assessment on cart owners (some of whom are not home owners) raised our hackles.

The phrase "richly landscaped" should be changed to "richly landscraped" as you will see by looking across the golf club toward the south from Eagle Drive. Such beauty as exists in the Ignacio Valley is very largely the result of hard work in their gardens by these wealthy home owners, some of whom are of an age which makes the enjoyment of a round of golf an impossibility without a golf cart.

The real reason for the change in "policy" as far as golf carts are concerned is simply that the club rents golf carts at $8.00 per 18 holes and derives a profit on such rentals.

Dope Dealers, Not Dope Addicts

I quote the following extract from your report on the supervisors' Aug. 13 hearing on the gun ordinance:

"Agreeing was a Larkspur man, who insisted that registration would be ignored by "burglars, holdup men, dope addicts, the Costa Nostra, black power militants, communists, and white supremacists."

Your report is both incomplete and in error, and I ask that you set the record straight. Though I clearly identified myself by name and as a writer of a letter to your paper which you emasculated but which I nevertheless sent verbatim to the Supervisors to indicate that I am unequivocally and unalterably opposed to this dangerous ordinance, I "insisted" nothing to which you referred.

Instead, I addressed to them a two-part question. I address the same question to you, and through you to your readers:

Second, what percentage of the following groups do you expect to register their guns: housebreakers, holdup men, dope dealers, the Cosa Nostra, black power militants, white supremacists, communists?

Interestingly, there was no response from the authors of this ill-conceived ordinance. . .

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

SENATOR JAVITS tells about a neighbor's ittle girl who really believes in the power of prayer. When her brother built a trap to catch sparrows, she prayed hard that he wouldn't catch any. Nor did he.

Some mornings later her mother asked, "What made you so sure your prayer would be answered?" "Well, for one thing, mother," replied the devout youngster, "I went bak there three days ago and kicked the trap to pieces."

The New Yorker Magazine, which delights in journalistic typos, came up with a honey recently. The item described a political dinner and began,

MARQUIS CHILDS

Late-Entry Charles McGovern: Forlorn Hope Of Die-Hards

WASHINGTON — "Secret Service Agent Snoble speaking. The senator will not return until late tonight." That is a measure of how fast George McGovern of South Dakota has jumped into the presidential sweepstakes, equipped not only with Secret Service protection but press secretaries, official advisers and finance men.

Most of the quipment comes pre-packaged from the loyal Kennedyites who have moved restlessly through the political landscape since the tragedy that befell Robert F. Kennedy. The motives of Theodore Sorensen, Pierre Salinger and the others centering on McGovern are obscure.

They have not forgiven Eugene McCarthy for the kind of attack he directed at Kennedy in the three primaries, Indiana, Oregon and California, that the two contested. They find it difficult, if not impossible, to accept anything like the inevitability of Hubert Humphrey's nomination.

At the same time, they know that the Kennedy delegates, notably California's big bag, are drifting into one camp or the other. Yet, should McGovern accumulate delegate strength as a Kennedy holding operation, where it would go in the showdown is far from clear.

A larger question is what actual political muscle survives out of the Kennedy past. McGovern has said that Kennedy was on the way to nomination and election when the blow fell. Yet this is open to serious doubt.

THIS IS A HEADY altitude, new and alien to McGovern, one of the most honorable and high-minded men in the Senate. His opposition to the Vietnam war was early and unwavering. He had worked hard for a program to expand agricultural production in line with his conviction, growing out of his work in Food for Peace, of the folly of the present policy of paying farmers not to produce.

It happens, of course, that McGovern is up for re-election for a second term in the Senate. Thus far McGovern has been running way ahead in the polls.

Yet some of his loayal allies are wondering what the consequences will be of his orbit into the presidential stratosphere. Since Kennedy's sweep of the delegate slate in South Dakota on the same day as the California primary, bitter feeling has grown up between the Kennedy and the Humphrey factions. One of the regulars whom the Kennedyites did not purge, Mrs. Mary Wallner, the national committee woman, has said she will not abide by the unit rule and will vote for Humphrey.

ON THE OTHER hand — and this is the way McGovern sees it — South Dakota, a state where fewer than 300,000 votes were cast in the election four years ago, will be proud to have a candidate. As a late starter, he confronts seemingly impossible problems, one of them being money.

"The Kennedy millions are behind me," he said to a friend, "but they're so far behind I can't even see them."

A SENATOR'S NOTEBOOK

Old Republican Defines 'Gut Issues' For U.S.

By EVERETT McKINLEY DIRKSEN

The campaign for election of the 37th President of the United States is going to be fought and won on the gut issues.

That is perhaps an inelegantly rough expression for use in a family newspaper, but only an aging maiden aunt would have the delicacy at a time like this to substitute "gut issue" with something nicer — "visceral issue," for example. I assure you, my perspective is not that of a maiden aunt.

Some things are going to be said in September and October that will rough up the country. Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew and the Democratic candidates are going to have to fight the issues that have given 200 million citizens the cold, awful feeling of fear that Americans have never seen before.

WHAT ARE the gut issues?

One of the two most important is combined in the problems of Vietnam and the tension between two superpowers. Nixon cannot go to Moscow before election day, so he will bear down on Vietnam. He will try to convince the people to accept his ideas for de-Americanization of the war. That means promotion of the idea of making the war an increasingly Vietnamese war with the best of American weapons to arm the South Vietnamese.

The second, but no less important issue, is the fear triggered by all of the agonizing things that beset us. If the people are afraid their sons will be killed in Vietnam, they are afraid, too, of the war in the big-city streets. They are afraid to go to church in the morning or to the corner drugstore in the darkening evening. When they drive home at night, they are afraid to steer into the dark alleys to their garage. Older people are afraid prices will go so high they won't be able to afford to live. Fear is a gut issue.

The people who know the condition of America's inventory of weapons — as of today — are crying out to us to replenish that inventory. In Vietnam we are using up everything we have. That is a gut issue.

THERE ARE VERY few countries of the world that do not, in one form or another, receive aid from the United States. Those countries must help us in Vietnam or forget all about aid from this nation of 50 states. India is receiving mountains of food from this country every day. Yet India is unaligned and isn't giving us even token help.

Japan has received the most generous concessions from us. Its exporters have free play on the U.S. market at the expense of the American producers. Japan can and now must help us in Vietnam with food and manufactured articles. That is another gut issue.

The labor standards of Europe and other countries are inexpressibly lower than ours — so low that, on a basis of price alone, sales of foreign-made goods and steel products to us here in the United States have placed us behind the eight-ball. Those entrepreneurs and export adventurers in foreign lands have moved in on us during our agony in Southeast Asia. They will have to agree that they won't ship into America more than the exactly right percentage of our growth market. If that isn't a gut issue, then I don't know what is.

OTHER ISSUES are the necessity of making an all-out effort, through manpower training and close co-operation with industry, to lay low and defeat the jobless problem; and the crying need to work out a pattern for dealing with the strikes that have paralyzed us across the nation from time to time — and always at the wrong time.

Politicians do not make the issues. The people make the issues, and so Nixon and his Democratic opponent have got to talk about the things people want to hear — the gut issues.

DIRE, COSTLY STRUGGLE

Vietnam War Now Ranks Longest In U.S. History

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The war in Vietnam became the longest war in American history last June 23, when it reached six years, six months and one day.

It was longer by a day than the Revolutionary War, if figured from the time of the skirmish at Lexington, Mass., on April 19, 1775, to the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown, Va., on Oct. 19, 1781.

It was longer than the Civil War — April 12, 1861, to April 9, 1865 — longer than either of the world wars, Korea, the War of 1812 or any of the campaigns in the Indian wars.

American casualties since the December 1961 ambush death of Spec. 4 James Thomas Davis, the soldier President Johnson called "the first American to fall in defense of our freedom in Vietnam," are nearly 26,000 killed. Among those killed was Thomas Lansden, a cousin of Davis, who died in action May 8 this year. He was 15 years old when Davis was killed.

It was late in 1955 that Lt. Gen. Samuel Tankersley Williams took over as commander of the U.S. military advisers in Vietnam to build up the South Vietnamese army.

Troop strengths went from Williams' 481 to the 1,500 advisers under the command of Gen. Paul D. Harkins in 1962. By the time Harkins left in 1964, they were 22,000. The total reached 208,800 by the end of 1965 and 536,000 last month.

The current count is more than the combined populations of the states of Alaska and Nevada as of the 1960 census. And if you count the men of the 7th fleet, you can add in the population of Beverly Hills, Calif.

The weekly casualty reports became larger. One hundred. Two hundred. Last spring the weekly average was pushing 500 and the total figure since Tom Davis died was nearly 26,000 in July.

A few years ago, military aid to South Vietnam was counted at a few million dollars a year. In fiscal 1968 it was about $25 billion. The figures compare with federal expenditures of less than $2 billion in fiscal 1917 — at the start of World War I. That was the nation's first billion-dollar-plus budget.

The country of South Vietnam covers an area of about 66,000 square miles — smaller than the state of Oklahoma. It has a population estimated at 16.5 million — a little larger than the New York City metropolitan area.

Of such numbers are the statistics of war composed.

By JERRY RANKIN

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Election-year pressure may spur the legislature to do in three weeks what it couldn't do in seven months — enact the property tax cuts promised last year for delivery in 1968.

When the lawmakers went home earlier this month, they left behind the scattered wreckage of several property tax relief plans backed by Gov. Ronald Reagan and the Assembly, but blocked by the Senate.

SPECIAL CARE?

The question now is whether Reagan can be convinced to put the whole matter before the legislators again in a special session next month. The lawmakers return Sept. 9 for a session on vetoed bills, and only Reagan can expand that to include other topics.

This assumes that the final adjournment of the general session Aug. 3 by Acting Gov. Hugh M. Burns is valid. Burns and a majority of the Senate say it is. Reagan says it is. The legislative counsel says it is.

UNRUH'S STAND

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh says it isn't, but as yet no steps have been taken to challenge the matter in court.

If the adjournment was final, as most Capitol observers believe, fresh bills will have to be introduced, since bills in the California Legislature cannot carry over from one session to the next.

And Reagan made it clear again at this week's news conference that the quarreling legislators of both parties will have to show him some evidence that "agreement is possible" on a tax relief plan before he will put it on the special session agenda.

However, the betting in the Capitol is that the Republican governor will put the matter before the Legislature next month. One reason is that both Burns and Unruh, the top Democratic leaders, have asked him to. Both men agree there is some chance of reaching a compromise. They are likely to be supported by important Republican legislators.

LITTLE TO LOSE

Reagan would appear to have little to lose by letting the legislators have another try. If a tax relief plan is enacted, he can point out his solid support for it and credit his influence as being responsible, at least in part, for its success.

If nothing is achieved, Reagan still would be able to tour the state in his campaign for a Republican majority in the Legislature this fall noting that Democrats were responsible for defeat of the tax relief they promised to provide in 1968.

Unruh, of course, could reply that Democrats in the Assembly provided enough votes this year to pass three different property tax cut bills — and that the blame for defeat rested with the Senate, which adamantly refused to accept any.

SALES TAX FATE

Also on everyone's mind is the fact that under current law, the state sales tax will drop automatically on Oct. 1 from five cents on the dollar to four and one-half cents, if no property tax slash is enacted and signed by Reagan.

It is that half penny, raised from last year's $1 billion tax increase, which was set aside to allow $155 million in property tax reduction this year. But the 1967 Legislature left it to the 1968 session to allocate, which has led to the current impasse.

The tax drop originally was scheduled for July 1, but when the lawmakers saw they couldn't agree on a plan by then they rushed through—and Reagan signed—emergency legislation putting off the sales tax reduction for three months. It is doubtful that another postponement could be pushed through if a property tax relief bill hasn't been produced by Oct. 1.

Reagan also continues to press for acceptance of his proposal to cut the state personal income tax for middle-bracket Californians by $35 million next year. He says the cut is justified because this group was hit harder than intended by last year's big tax boost. The outlook for legislative passage of the bill continues dim — but it could provide a key bargaining point between the governor and the legislature if a property tax bill seems near enactment.

THREE IDEAS

Three main methods of distributing the $155 million in property tax relief have been suggested so far:

—Give the money directly to the 58 boards of county supervisors, with the intention that they then would reduce the local property tax rate by the amount of money their county receives. Reagan favors this approach. It passed the Assembly, but got only 21 of the 27 votes needed for Senate passage.

—Give the money to the counties again, but this time specify that it will be used to cut the part of the local property tax which supports welfare programs. Reagan accepted this as an alternative when the first plan was defeated, but it was rejected both in a Senate committee and then on the floor, obtaining only 14 of the needed 27 votes.

—Give the money to the 1,300 or so local school districts, with the intention they then reduce their local property tax rate by a corresponding amount. Reagan at first supported this early in the year, but later discarded the idea.

Two other specialized property tax relief proposals also are possible, although they are far below the $155 million general reduction.

One would give homeowners 65 years of age or older a $20 million tax break by raising the amount of income they could receive and still be eligible for special tax relief enacted in 1967.

The other would make a start on eliminating the tax now levied on business inventories every March. It would cut the average businessman's tax by 15 per cent, and has general legislative support. Money to carry it out also was set aside from last year's tax increase, but this plan has been caught in Assembly-Senate maneuvering over broader tax relief and other financial matters.

URUGUAY TOTTERS ON EDGE OF RUIN

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

MONTEVIDEO (UPI) — In this grim Southern Hemisphere winter, an average of 2,000 discouraged citizens a month are applying for passports to leave Uruguay, a welfare state gone wrong.

The palm trees of Montevideo, drooping sickly on a gray day, reflect the atmosphere in which the government of President Jorge Pacheco Areco is trying to impose austerity to halt a galloping inflation which has brought the country to the edge of ruin.

Once hailed as the happiest country in South America, Uruguay is still considered the most democratic. It is also one of the world's best-fed nations.

But in the last two months, Pacheco Areco, a president almost by accident, has declared a limited state of siege to stop crippling strikes, drafted protesting public service workers, jailed some of their leaders, fired dissenters and has frozen prices and wages by decree. He has used the police against demonstrating students to enforce order in the streets.

Within the limits of Uruguay's constitution and tradition, that was some achievement. Now Pacheco Areco faces the task of getting his stabilization program through a parliament where his opponents outnumber his friends and even influential leaders of his own party are against him.

Only by getting his traditional Blanco (white) party rivals to support it against dissidents in his own Colorado (red) party has he much chance of getting it through.

The cost of living shot up 136 per cent last year in what must be a near record, and this year it has already climbed another 64 per cent. Wages kept up a vain chase of prices until Pacheco Areco finally stepped in to try to stop both by decree.

A likeable but virtually unknown vice president until the late President Oscar Gestido died last year, the 48-year-old Pacheco Areco believes the solution for Uruguay is along the classical path of austerity. His opponents, within his party and without, believe the correction must come through spending, basic reforms and tight controls. It is the same argument that echoes elsewhere in Latin America.

NO TAKEOVER

Few Uruguayans believe that the armed forces will step in to take over as other Latin American armies have, and few would be ready yet to drop Uruguay's civilian tradition. Virtually no one believes the country could become "another Cuba." But public unhappiness runs deep nonetheless.

Created in 1828 as a buffer state between Argentina and Brazil, Uruguay is a land of grassy pampas where flocks of sheep and herds of cattle provide the wool and meat which are its main exports. In the summer, thousands of tourists from neighboring countries join Uruguayans on their sunny Atlantic beaches which are among the world's finest.

With 72,000 square miles, it is about the size of Missouri. About half of its 2,800,000 inhabitants live in the capital, Montevideo. They are overwhelmingly of European descent; the country has no racial problems.

In summer, life in Uruguay changes. Problems fade. Some 150,000 Argentine tourists arrive from across the Rio de la Plata, not to mention tours of elderly North Americans, fleeing from the Northern Hemisphere winter to Punta del Este and other resorts. Around $30 million dollars comes with them into the country. There is relative prosperity.

There is a saying in Montevideo that if Pacheco Areco can keep up his policy until summer when Uruguayans flock to the beaches, he can keep it up until autumn.

THE BIG PUZZLE

'Dovish' Unruh Holding Key To Where Votes Will Be Cast

By DeVAN L. SHUMWAY

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Populous California, with its big bloc of 174 votes at the Democratic National Convention, is the biggest puzzle in the West. The answer may not be known until the roll call at Chicago later this month.

The California delegation's heart still belongs to the late Robert F. Kennedy, felled by an assassin as he left a victory rally after winning the state's primary.

HONOR VOTE?

It still is possible —but only just —that the group could cast a vote in honor of the late New York senator on the first ballot. Or the delegation could split six ways to Sunday.

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, who delights in the use of political power, is leader of California's group. Lately, he has become an outspoken Vietnam dove.

In late July he called for a total cessation of U. S. bombing of North Vietnam. He said it had become clear a military solution to the war "is not really feasible" and a political solution must be found.

Unruh has been making some concessions to supporters of Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy. He put co-leaders of the McCarthy campaign in California on the state delegation. What this means is unclear.

MUCH UNCLEAR

Also very much unclear is the extent to which the more dovish of the delegates might gravitate to Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota, who announced his "peace" candidacy for the nomination just last week. McGovern is wooing those who supported Kennedy.

Both McCarthy and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey have campaigned hard among members of the California delegation.

But a Humphrey strategist in the state reminded a newsman that the vice president never counted on California in his nomination victory blueprints. He did not enter the June 5 primary, although a slate of party regulars favoring him was on the ballot.

Unruh says that if Humphrey wants support of the now uncommitted California group he will have to shed some Johnson Administration policies.

"He would have to take a position different from the Administration on the Vietnam war," says Unruh.

UNLIKE KENNEDY

The California Democrat says frankly that neither of the two leading candidates fully pleases him because neither has Kennedy's "kind of commitment" to the nation's domestic problems.

"The vice president has a great deal of concern over domestic problems and has evidenced it over the past year," Unruh says. "But he clearly has no appeal to the young people."

McCarthy has appeal to young voters, Unruh says, but not to the Negro community.

Perhaps Unruh put his own personal position best when he replied to a question about whom he expects to support as his party's nominee.

"I really don't know," he said. "I'm not leaning toward anyone; I'm waiting for someone to lean toward me."

Unruh, whose rise to political power came through the legislature and his own organization in Southern California, wants the people —the non-organization Democrats —to play a major role at the convention.

"If the platform is spoon-fed to the convention along with all officers of the convention, the Democratic Party is in for deep trouble this fall," he said.

OTHER PLACES

Around the rest of the West, the support is mostly for Humphrey, although the 35-member Oregon delegation was pledged to McCarthy on the first two ballots by the May 28 primary.

State Sen. Edward Fadeley, outgoing state chairman and a McCarthy backer, said he figures McCarthy has a one in four chance for the nomination.

"Bookies who give Gene one chance in 10 show they don't have as much political sense as the American people," Fadeley said.

But Oregon's is about the only orderly situation. Neighboring Washington, for example, is divided 33 and one-half for Humphrey, 12 and one-half for McCarthy and 1 undecided.

"The big issue at the convention will be whether it is an open convention or a railroad job," said John Wilson, the delegation chairman and state campaign chairman for Humphrey.

The nation's most westerly states, Alaska and Hawaii, are split between Humphrey and McCarthy.

IDAHO OPINION

William O. Payton, Idaho's delegation chairman, said he felt Humphrey would win simply "because he's the best man."

"Vice President Humphrey represents the very things the party stands for," said Robert Rose, Nevada state chairman. "Humphrey can unite the party. He would have the greatest drawing appeal in the South and from the conservative elements of the party."

Utah State Chairman A. Wally Sandack said he felt Nixon's nomination by the Republicans gave the Democrats a good chance to win.

"There is only one issue so far as I am concerned and that is the Vietnam issue," he said. "If we ever get that straightened out and reorganize our priorities, then we'll be able to run our own country."

"I don't think we should feel we have a sure winner," said Richard Duffield, Arizona state chairman. "I believe that if we don't come out of the convention with a united party, we are in for serious trouble."

For vice president, most of the political leaders of the West would have liked Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, but understand why he doesn't want to run.

Some would like the nominee for president to leave the selection of the No. 2 man open for the convention. But few expect that to happen.

This Week In The World

By United Press International

A four-engine DC7 knifed out of the pre-dawn fog over Biafra this week, circled a narrow dirt road along which natives were holding gas lamps to light the way, and dipped down in a precarious, but precise landing.

After the plane bumped to a halt along the rutted road, its wingtips just feet away from trees on either side, out stepped Count Carl Gustav von Rosen, a veteran Swedish aviator who has been flying hazardous relief missions since 1935.

He had just defied Nigerian radar-controlled anti-aircraft fire to fly 11 tons of food and medicine into the secressionist colony, where relief officials say 3,000 Biafrans are dying daily from starvation.

"It was awful," said Rosen. "When I watched the terrible situation in person, I did really feel that something had to be done."

So Rosen is going back, with more supplies, and he hopes other relief flights will follow his route. He declined to give details of it to any but relief pilots, for he feels the route is the safest yet that has been flown over the Nigerian guns.

The threat of the deadly weapons has virtually halted all other relief flights from nearby islands, where tons of supplies collected by several relief organizations is waiting to be flown into Biafra. Rosen's plane carried cargo contributed by the German branch of Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief organization.

The federal government of Nigeria, from which Biafra seceded May 30, 1967, opposes the flights into the nation's former eastern region on the grounds the planes may be carrying arms.

Federal troops have pushed Biafran soldiers back in bloody war to unite the country, sending refugees fleeing before the armies. More than 600,000 refugees now are crammed into camps and relief officials say at least 200 tons of food is needed daily to avert "massive human tragedy."

Around The World; Around The Clock:

Saigon: U.S. Marine forces, smashing into Communist troops in the Demilitarized Zone separating the two Vietnams, triggered the bloodiest fighting in two months. More than 200 Communist troops were killed in the initial surge by the Marines.

Paris: The beginning of the fourth month of talks on the Vietnam War were marked by the return to Paris of Le Duc Tho, a key figure in the North Vietnam negotiating delegation, who returned after six weeks in Hanoi.

Los Angeles: Three Negroes died in violence that erupted at the end of the third annual Watts Summer Festival, marking the riots of 1965.

Part of the art of defending well is to let your partner in on your secrets in such situations.

West opened the king of spades, and East naturally followed suit with the queen. West then led the ace of spades, and East didn't know what to do.

It seemed quite possible that South had the jack of spades and that West was next going to lead a low spade for East to ruff.

KEEPS IT SECRET

To avoid giving information to declarer East discarded the deuce of diamonds on the ace of spades.

West continued with the jack of spades, but that was the last trick for the defense.

When West led a fourth spade, declarer could afford to ruff in dummy with the king of hearts.

AN INFORMATIVE JACK

West knew he could take two more spade tricks as soon as his partner's queen fell at the first trick.

West could keep his partner informed by leading the jack of spades instead of the ace at the second trick.

On seeing the jack of spades, East would know that he would get a discard at the second trick and another discard at the third trick.

East would throw the ten of clubs first and the deuce of clubs next, showing his doubleton and demanding a switch to clubs.

Pineapple Imports Hurting Hawaii

The Hawaii Pineapple Growers Assn. reports that the U.S. imported more than 4 million cases, a new record, in 1967. American buyers paid an estimated $21 million for the more cheaply produced foreign-packed pineapple.

Athe Pineapple Growers said Hawaii's production in the past 10 years has average between 12 and 13 million cases of canned pineapple, as its share of the world market has dropped from 56 per cent to 42 per cent.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Aug. 17, the 230th day of 1968 with 136 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1935 first baseman Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees set an American League record by playing his 1,308 consecutive game.

In 1965 the curfew was lifted in the Watts section of Los Angeles after 34 persons had been killed in 6 days of rioting.

The Neglected Aged— Housing That Cares

Marin Experts Write A Guide For Those Planning Retirement Centers

By DON KEOWN

"Perhaps no other age group has experienced such tragic disappointment as those of our elders who have moved into retirement communities only to learn later that the community was either in poor financial condition or improperly managed."

So says James Frush Jr. of San Rafael.

Frush can claim expertise on the subject on two counts.

He is vice president and director of research for Retirement Residence Inc., administrator-developer of St. Paul's Towers in Oakland and Canterbury Woods in Pacific Grove, and management consultant to Calaroga Terrace in Portland Ore.

THE FIRM currently has under construction The Tamalpais on Via Casitas in Greenbrae, a 10-million-dollar project of 12 stories on a six-acre site.

And he is also one of the authors of a newly-published book, "The Retirement Residence."

Co-author of the book with Frush is Benson Eschenbach, an architect who is also a part-time Marin resident, maintaining a home on Tomales Bay as well as at Point Richmond.

THE OBJECTIVE of the book, the authors say, is to prevent just such tragic situations as referred to by Frush in his opening statement.

The book is a highly technical analysis of management and architectural matters involved in providing "life-care housing."

Frush, 37, describes it as "a book of do's and don'ts, not platitudes," and adds: "The reader is told not only what to do, but how much it will cost."

The emphasis is upon the all-important factor of economic feasibility.

FRUSH SAYS that many individuals and organizations of the best character and with the finest charitable intentions find themselves helplessly and hopelessly entangled financially when they become involved unwisely in retirement or life-care projects.

The elderly caught up in those situations are no less the victims because of the good intentions of the sponsors, Frush adds.

The book, published by Charles C. Thomas of Springfield, Ill., notes that in 1970 there will be 28 million Americans over 60 years of age. This increase will trigger a corresponding growth in the number of sponsors involved in life-care facilities.

FRUSH ADVISES that "life-care facilities should not be confused with 'retirement communities,' that are housing tracts with recreational programs, usually located out of the city centers. These serve only as interim housing for the relatively young and active retired person."

Life-care centers should be located in both urban and suburban areas, he contends, so that the resident can select the environment in which he feels most "at home."

This permits him, too, to be involved in true community-wide activities, rather than to be segregated with his own age group alone.

FRUSH SAYS that life-care centers should provide full-scale, on-site medical and hospital facilities offering treatment for long-term illnesses, and specialized nursing personnel to minister to those with milder chronic ailments that often accompany advanced age.

Frush was born in San Francisco, but reared in San Rafael. He is a graduate of the Department of Humanities at Stanford University, has done advanced work at the University of California, and is active in the International Hospital Federation, the Gerontological Society, and the American Management Association.

Prior to co-authoring "The Retirement Residence," he had written a number of papers and articles on the care and sociological needs of the elderly, and had earned a reputation as an authority in gerontology.

IT IS A field that has too often been neglected, Frush believes.

He explains: "The United States is a young country. Our whole emphasis has been on youth. Until recently, our national concern for the elderly has been limited to the indigent aged whose housing needs were solved by the old-age institution — an institution which relieved the conscience while keeping the old folks out of sight, and an institution which by its nature exchanged hope for security."

The life-care facility offers the advantage of being fitted to the elderly person's special needs, Frush says. It avoids the loneliness and inadequacies of living alone, and also the obvious drawbacks of living with younger relatives.

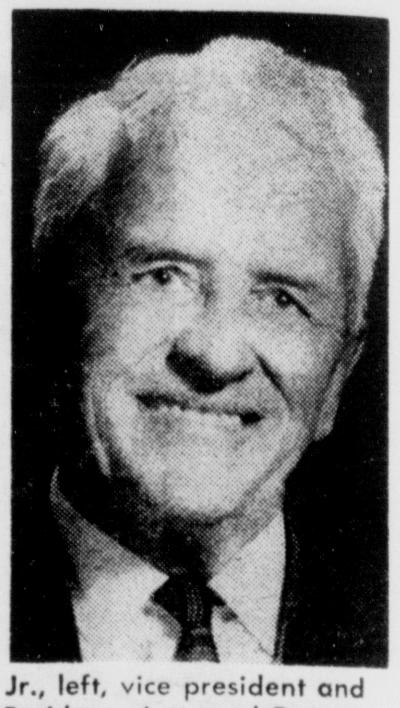
FRUSH AND co-author Eschenbach see signs that this country has awakened finally to the necessity for meeting the real needs of the elderly.

"Until a few years ago it was a problem which was left to religious and fraternal organizations; today it is almost regarded as a national crisis."

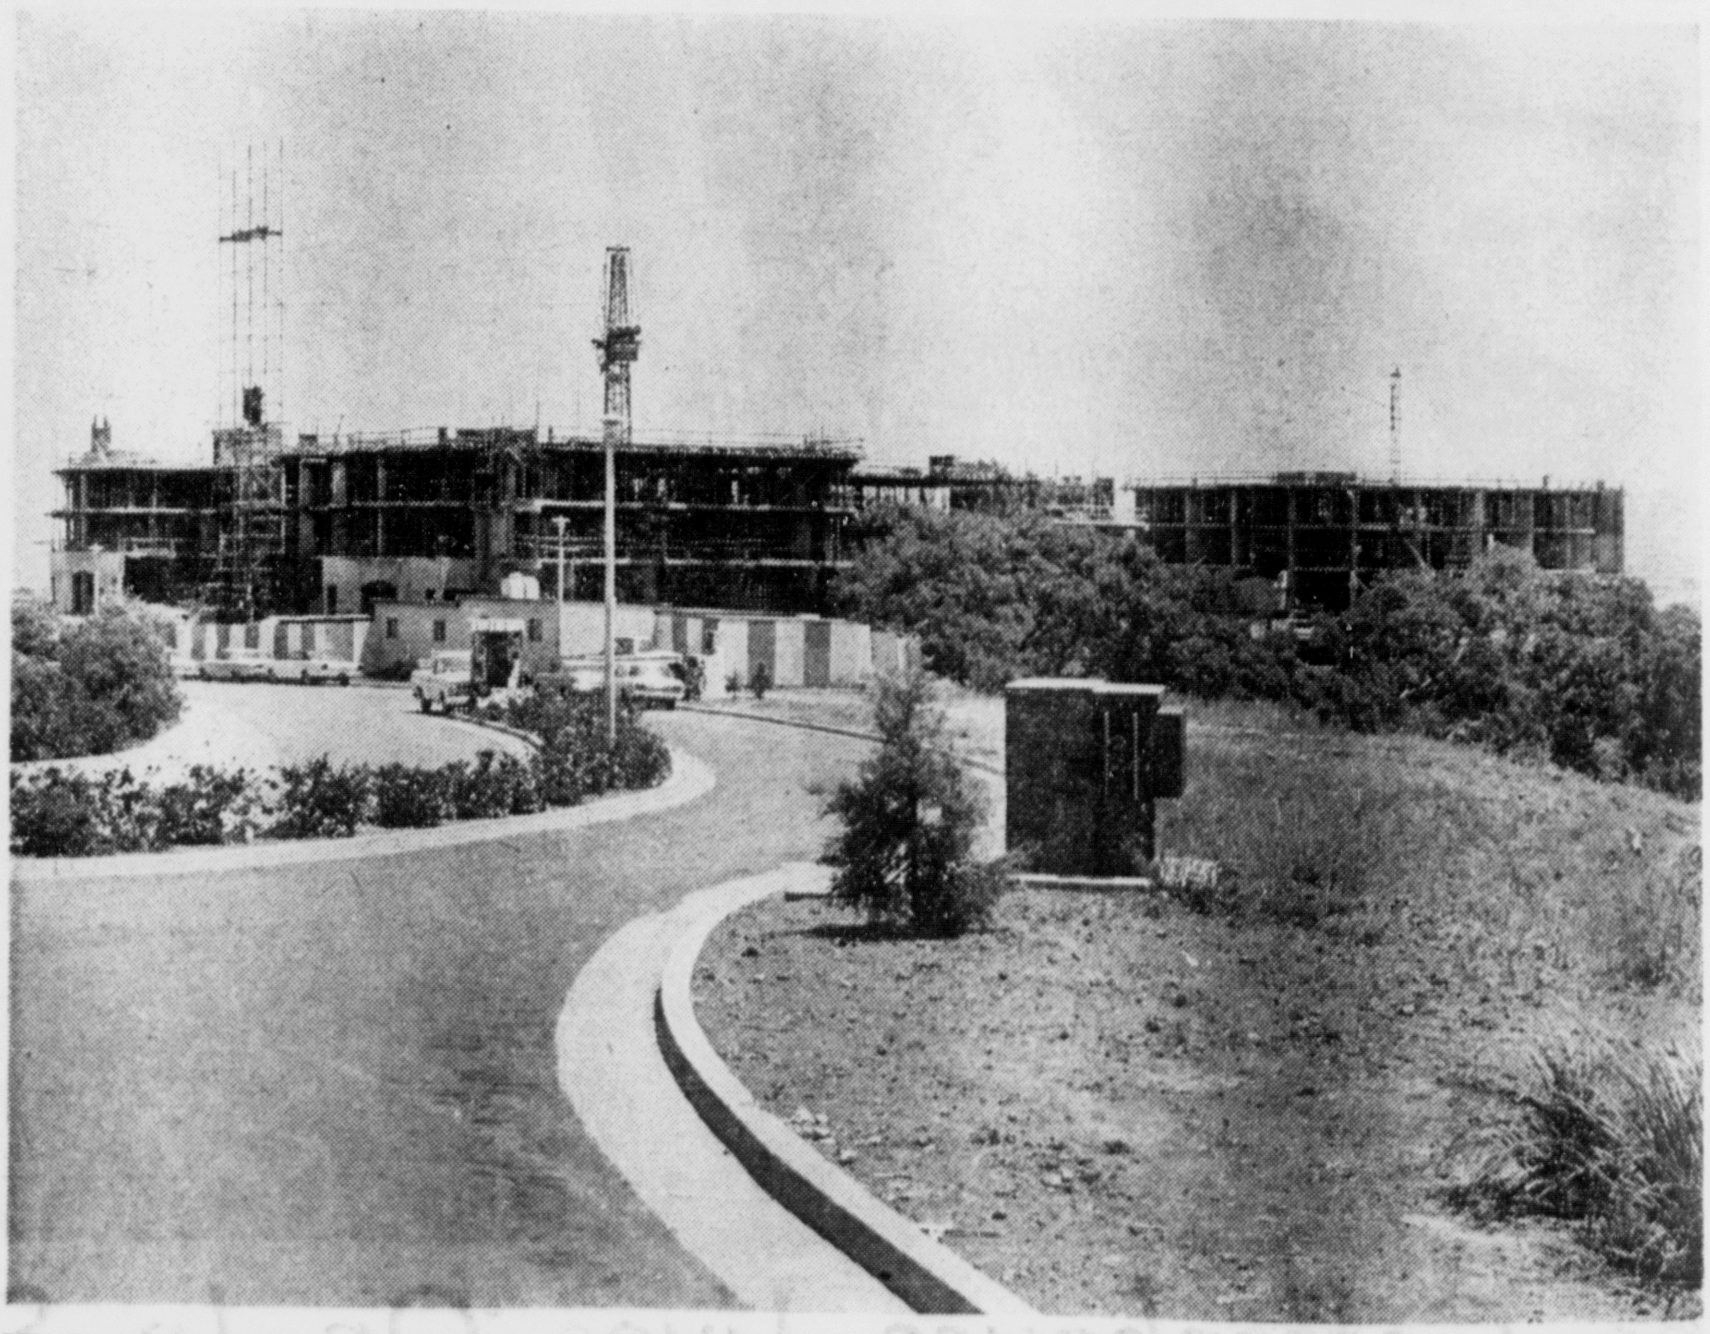
They hope their book will help avert a real crisis, by bringing about care facilities that are not only adequate for the elderly, but also soundly managed so that the residents need not fear the failure of the project or the curtailment of services.

THE TWO Marinites believe they have drawn a professional blueprint "that should be mandatory reading for anyone interested in sponsoring housing or life-care projects for the elderly."

And they think their book will also make thoughtful reading for those contemplating their own future as they grow older in today's society.



TWO MARIN MEN, James Frush Jr., left, vice president and research director for Retirement Residence Inc., and Benson Eschenbach, architect, are the co-authors of a newly-published book, "The Retirement Residence," a guide for developers and sponsors of housing with care for the elderly.



RETIREMENT RESIDENCE INC. currently has under construction in Greenbrae on Via Casitas, the Tamalpais, a 10-million-dollar project that will offer housing and care for the elderly. The firm, with which James Frush Jr. of San Rafael is associated as vice president, is now administering projects it developed in Oakland and Pacific Grove, and also serves as a management consultant in the field. A Coffeehouse Thrives In Sausalito

The Lions Share Offers Refreshments, Good Music And Friendly Atmosphere

By GARY TISCHLER

The old coffeehouse is a myth now, a fairytale told by has-been writers to wide-eyed teen-agers in the Midwest.

Its passing, like Jack Kerouac growing old, is still mourned by certain people who don turtlenecks and beads on weekends, and practice nodding their heads with a beat on Saturday morning.

We have good news for the nostalgic.

One coffeehouse, at least, is alive and thriving on a Sausalito back street, wrapped in tinfoil and stripped of all the old cliches, and it goes under the name of The Lions Share.

IT IS NOT strictly a coffeehouse any longer, although they do sell coffee there, along with hot cider, wine and beer and breakfast late or early on a Sunday morning. It has become a directional music center, a place to put your finger on the pulse of what's happening in today's swiftly-changing pop music field and let it tingle awhile.

The Lions Share at Caledonia and Pine has some of the qualities that we cherished about the mythical coffeehouse — a certain comfortable, slightly shabby lived-in quality, a close-in intimacy, an unimposing bar in the corner, a small touch of quaint amateurism at times, restrooms with intelligent graffiti, mued semi-darkness.

But that automatic barrier between square and hip, old and young, within and without, uptight and cool, is gone, lying somewhere in the scattered kitchen in back of the musicians' stand.

THAT QUALITY, the enjoyment equivalent of a black and white lunch counter, is one of the Share's winning qualities — that and the music and sound that is heard there, that and the fact that it is prospering at all in a town that is not shy on entertainment, barstools or clubs.

It sits, with its shuttered windows cased in tinfoil to tone

Sausalito Coffeehouse Is The Place For Latest And Best In Folk-Rock

Down and across the street, a block away, is the jazz-oriented Gatsby's. The Marin Theater, the county's most anonymous, high-quality movie theater is right across the street. Out front by the main drag off Highway 101 is the musical club for couples and wayfarers, Zacks.

COME ON IN a minute and see what's it like.

If you come in about the middle of the evening around 10 o'clock, the place is packed. Posters of this poster-happy age stare back at you impishly.

Right away, if you've forgotten to disguise yourself, you know you won't have to hide in a dark corner, even if your boss is prone to check on you. For your boss may have been there an hour already, enjoying himself.

You look around and the audience is like a late-night subway. There are long hairs, short hairs and ties, evening dresses, mini-skirts and blue jeans, desert-beards and Gillette-clean chins, over-30 and under-20, and no arguments.

IT IS THE music, of course. They call it, very loosely, folk-rock, perhaps for want of a better word, or because the two areas have come together in a wistful, rowdy marriage that combines the best of both.

Mike Considine, the bearded owner of the club who looks best in a slightly-worn Australian desert hat, explains it simply.

"The music appeals to everyone, no matter what their taste or interest is," he said. "We get a lot of youngsters who enjoy the place so that the next week they come in with their parents. Then, the following week, the parents will being their friends. The music is just universal."

IT'S EASY enough to explain the music away by saying it's too noisy and besides it's a kids' thing. But the music at the Share is gapingly removed from toys and be-bopping. It has a validity of its own, and in the compact, warm atmosphere of the Share, it comes to the fore.

It's a feel-good, think music, at once lyrical and original, and very physical. It's very much of today's world, the one that everyone lives in, full of its language and happenings.

You can keep track of the changing drift of the field as it dips into folk, Indian, bluegrass, blues and most of the pop spectrum. And at the Share, you are likely to find the very best in the field.

POPPING IN and out of the Share for over a year now, we have seen a wide and marvelous range of talent, some of it dispersed now.

Right now a frequent performer there is Belvedere-based Gale Garnett, the girl with the big expressive eyes and moving delivery, who made it big a while back with "We'll Sing In The Sunshine."

John Stewart of Mill Valley, former member of the now defunct Kingston Trio, sings there, performing his own material like Gale. Along with girl singer Buffy Ford, he sings his muted lyrics about the West and California, full of the names of real places.

THERE HAVE been the likes of Sandy Bull, an amazingly talented instrumentalist; Dave Van Ronk; Uncle Tom's Committee; and Erik Frandsen, considered one of the best guitar picker on the West Coast.

More recently there have been "The Cleanliness and Godliness Skiffil Band," "Dr. Humbead's New Tranquility String Band and Medicine Show," Dallas Williams and "West".

The Lions Share Is Friendly Place That Draws A True Cross-Section

There Are No Protests Or Politics; Just Good Music In Abundance

Last month's musical menu included Marvin Gardens, a sort of blues-rock band with a lively lead singer, a big, boisterous girl who belts the blues.

Something in a different vein has been the "The Styx River Ferry", who specialize in country, western and bluegrass music, with all the accompanying string virtuosity and plaintive, beguiling wailing. "Rejoice", an up-and-coming group, singer with an amazing, toe-features Nancy Brown, a girl curling voice.

ON TAP THIS month is the nationally-famed "New Lost City Ramblers."

Nearly all of these groups and individual artists have recorded their work. Tuesday, when the admission is free, is the night for those who haven't gotten around to it yet.

They call it "amateur night" or "hoot night." Generally, it's a free-for-all night for anyone with an itch to pluck, try out or sing out. In some ways, on a good night, it is the high spot of the week, simply because it's unpredictable.

WE'VE SEEN a scowling Scotsman playing the fiddle, heard a wonderfully alive old lady sing old sailor chanteys, a brother and sister do shy bluegrass, and a bearded gent read poetical essays. It is that kind of a night and place.

On almost any night, you're lightly to run into Mike Hunt, a long-haired, impish fellow who also happens to be an extremely talented lad with a large facility for laughing. He sings "Suzanne" as well or better than anyone around.

Considine watches the changing scene with a sage eye.

"The groups today are trying to communicate," he said "and they differ in format. In commenting on today's society, the groups may range from singing their most private thoughts to the backwoods, country music."

THE VERY close-in intimacy of the Share gives for a unique kind of feedback, often unvoiced, between performer and audience. It's an easy-going thing of chit-chat and laughter and good music, a rare quality found in few nightclubs of any kind.

The music may get serious at times, and the lyrics may provoke some thoughts, but they never provoke the kind of atmosphere that is so easily associated with the old coffeehouse — dark-corner activism, rabble-rousing and politics, put-downs and shouting.

"WE MIX NO politics here," he said. "No protests. No demonstrations. We just want folks to be entertained."

Plemmons and Considine, who have worked together now for the past seven months, share similar backgrounds that are far removed from the atmosphere of the Share.

Both are former U.S. marines, Considine as a sergeant, Plemmons as a captain.

Plemmons went to hotel administration school at Cornell. Considine went through the same course at Columbia University. Considine, 32, has worked at the Sheraton Hotels, Plemmons, 34, worked with the Hilton chain. Both have a small child. Mike with his 1-year-old daughter Shawn, and Zane with his 3-year-old son Dave.

THE SYMBIOSIS of Considine and Plemmons help make the Share what it is — a friendly place.

Perhaps not quite like the mythical coffeehouse that may never have been, but a good place, nevertheless. Good like that 2 a.m. breakfasts, the hot cider, the integration of so many kinds of people there.

Like the sign in the restroom that says "Hooray, Hooray, it's the First of May! Outdoor loving starts today."

That's downright friendly.

MIKE HUNT, the Lions Share master of ceremonies, jester, spot announcer and regular singer on Sunday evenings, gets off some ribticklers that delight audience and musicians in the informal coffeehouse-club.

THE TWO MEN who make The Lions Share go . . . the owner of the coffeehouse-club, Zane Plemmons is his manager. Bearded Mike Considine is survey the scene.

Youth Exchange Homes, Ideas

By GIL PEARSON

While a certain amount of ethnocentrism is understandable and often even desirable, these are times that call for international exchanges of ideas and for understanding.

Janice Wright of Mill Valley, a 1965 youth exchangee to Japan and a sociology major at Sonoma State College where she is a senior, defines the ethnocentric person as one who adopts the emotional attitude that his own race, nation or culture is superior to all others.

But Webster's Dictionary also offers a second, softer definition, according to which the ethnocentric is one who emphasizes and promotes the best attributes of his own people.

But she adds that she also "learned that attitudes different from ours are not necessarily worse."

In order for youth to engage in such exchanges of ideas and thus expand its horizons, the transoceanic movement must be a two-way one. So just as Janice Wright and other young Americans have traveled westward across the Pacific, young Japanese have crossed that same ocean eastward bound to the United States.

THIS SUMMER, 20-year-old Shizuko Arai is paying such a reciprocal exchange visit to Marin County and making her home temporarily with her sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Perry of Sausalito, and with other American families.

What are the initial impressions of America held by the beautiful Japanese girl?

"There are so many blue eyes," she said. "Also I notice the quietness of the Bay Area (her own home is in fast-paced Tokyo.)."

MUIR WOODS? "Oh, it is so calm."

"What don't I like?" After a long pause: "Well, I'm so sorry, but I cannot eat German potato salad. But I like being taught to cook oatmeal. However, tonight I will prepare sashimi (raw fish) for my hosts."

SHIZUKI ARAI is a sophomore at St. Margaret's Rikkyo College at Mitakadai. She has studied English for six years.

At home, she says, she boils fish every single day for her two cats of which "Oyabun is the boss."

Her boy friend, Ha Jime Misu, is also an exchange student, now being hosted at Sacramento. He will become a technician for Na-

Shizuko weighs "45 kilos" (99 pounds). When shopping for shoes in San Rafael, she staggered the salesman by asking for size 23 (centimeters). Americanized, that came out to size five.

In a San Francisco Chinatown restaurant with the Perrys she handled her chopsticks with such dexterity that a nearby tourist was moved to comment, "Oh, she is Chinese." Turning quickly, Shizuko corrected the woman, pôlitely but firmly: "No, I'm Japanese!"

LATER ON she bought two watches, one of which is a pendant for her mother. "Watches are very expensive in our country."

And she spoke of her family back home in Nakanoku. "My parents do not allow rock and roll music in the living room, so I have to listen to it in my own room.

"Mother and father sleep on a futon (mattress rolled out on the floor), but I have always slept in an American-style bed. My father owns a scientific equipment company. He plays golf and often barbecues in our garden.

"My sister, Nobuko, was in the 1967 exchange program at Sacramento — she told us the weather there was hot. My other sister, Hideko, designs kimonos professionally. We wear the traditional Japanese kimonos only at New Year."

THIS YOUTH exchange program is an annual project of Lions International.

A sentence in a letter to the Perrys from Bunsuke Ogasawara, a Tokyo Lions tail-twister, reads: "I hope this program creates sincere friendship between both your country and ours, and (that) the mutual understanding through this will prove a strong root for the world peace."

Miss Arai is visiting five families during her six weeks stopover in California; two in Sausalito, and the others in Larkspur, Ventura, and Hollywood.

She came over by plane along with 103 other young people ages 16 to 22. They all wore specially designed white jackets with the Lions' emblem on the left pocket. The $800 travel fare is borne by the students. Meals and housing are provided by the sponsoring families.

VOLUNTEER families are needed both in America and in Japan since the demand for this program is greater than the available supply of sponsors.

Shizuko's sponsors, the Perrys, have visited Japan often.

On one occasion they asked a Yokohama sign-maker to cut out the Japanese lettering for "Perry" to be used as a nameplate for their Sausalito home. But they learned that there is no figure for the letter P. So they settled for their first name "Jackson."

TO RETURN to the earlier mentioned American exchangee, Janice Wright: I spoke with her at the Mill Valley home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilmore.

Asked for her recollections of Japan, she responded: "They gave me pure red-carpet treatment all the way. The Tokyo Lions' Club handed each of us $50 for pocket money the moment we arrived. But we really didn't need it because everytime they learned of something we wanted, they bought it for us. My many gifts included a Mikimoto pearl ring, a tape recorder, silver brooches, fans, silkscreen scrolls, kimonos and other beautiful things.

"I visited homes in Nagoya,

"Why Does My Daughter's Dress Hang Unevenly?"

Your daughter's dress is a bias cut garment. Just the weight of the material will cause it to hang longer in one place than another. In purchasing a bias cut garment you purchased a problem. Your daughter doesn't even need to wear the dress to have it hang unevenly.

A further problem develops because the skirt is accordion-pleated. That requires pinning by hand and pressing lengthwise which makes it even more out of shape. Accordion-pleated skirts are much more expensive to finish, too, even though they are "permanently" pleated. "Permanent" pleats may be easier to repleat but in most cases extra care and time are required and that means extra expense. Your daughter's dress is attractive, but it has many problems built in it.

Kyoto, Tokyo and Hiroshima. I went to Sumo wrestling matches and I visited the Hiroshima Museum which made no bones about depicting the horrors of the bombing there. The natives took great pride in showing me how well they have done with reconstruction.

"I LEARNED that many Japanese girls prefer to have their husbands chosen by their parents. They know their folks are going to pick solid citizens who'll be good providers.

"The typical Japanese home has an extremely plain exterior, but inside the appointments are positively fabulous. In time, I drew an analogy from this structural treatment of their homes. The character of the people is very much like their domiciles. They are not ostentatious and are delightfully warm at heart.

"Although modernization is conspicious, many women still are not on an equal basis with men. They don't smoke in public. They don't eat with the men — they eat afterward. Very few drive cars.

"THERE ARE no gay, riproaring parties. Japanese are constantly shocked by visitors who whoop it up.

"Bowing is a fine art. When one Japanese enters the home of another, the host instantly makes a judgment as to his visitor's social standing. If it is higher than his, he bows lower and longer than the visitor bows.

CHATS AMONG young people such as this conversation between Suzan Perry, left, and Shizuko Arai is one of the most effective methods by which the Lions Club youth exchange program achieves its good of promoting international understanding and goodwill.

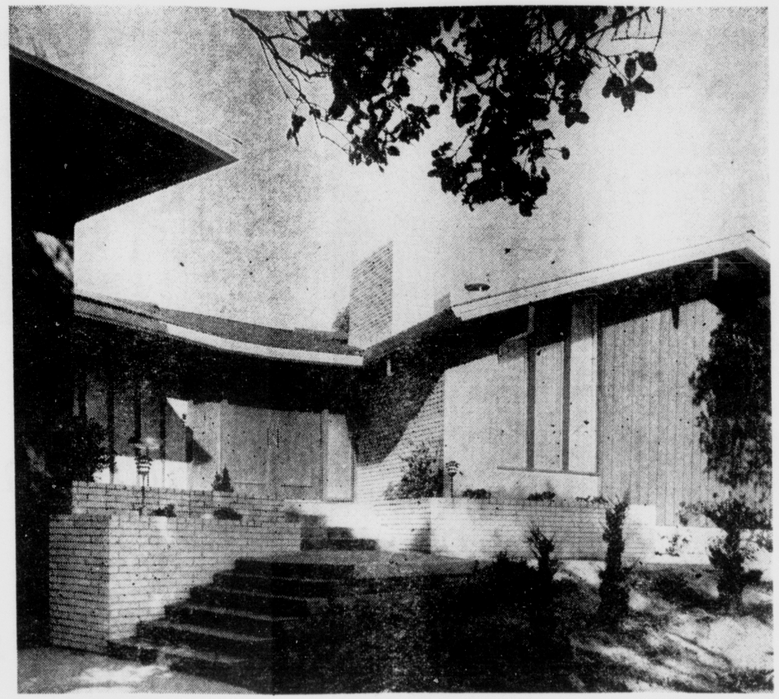
THIS FRONT VIEW of the Paul Winton home in San Rafael's Loch Lomond district shows how architect Bernard J. Bloch took special pains to nestle it comfortably in the midst of the handsome oak trees that distinguish the site. Vertical strip windows provide a wash of light along the brick and marble fireplace inside the living room. Siding is rustic redwood, the roof cedar shingles, and white ruffle brick is also used extensively.



A CLOSER VIEW of the entrance to the Winton home shows such detail as the exposed aggregate stairs that lead to the heavy oak entrance doors. Chimney and planter walls are of white ruffle brick. Planter lighting has been used extensively by landscape architects Paul and Katy Steinmetz for night illumination. (Photos by Elwing Studio)

THE OTHER END of the living room has a huge picture window with a marine view seen between oak trees. A sliding door opens onto a patio off the family room. Carpet is a deep olive green, the walls off-white. Note the exposed beam and plank construction of the ceiling.

A Home Nestled In Midst Of Stately Oaks

Paul Winton Residence Blends With Its Natural Surroundings

The Paul Winton home on Dunfries Terrace in San Rafael's Loch Lomond district was designed by architect Bernard J. Bloch so as to take full advantage of the contours of a gently sloping site, and to preserve the stately oaks that beautify the grounds.

So successful was the designer that only three of the 10 oaks had to be removed, and the remaining trees now wrap themselves gracefully around the split-level home.

THE SPLIT-LEVEL design locates the bedrooms above the garage. An attractively designed balcony off those rooms with a glorious view of San Pablo Bay adds a softening touch. And the bedrooms are "zoned away" from the main portion of the house, even having their own heating system.

The lower portion of the split level has a spacious entrance hall that connects the lower rooms — living, family, kitchen and breakfast, and separate dining.

The architect selected as the exterior materials rustic redwood siding stained a bark brown color, Dutch white ruffle-faced brick fireplace and planter walls, and tan stucco panels accented by vertical redwood trim.

MOLDINGS ON THE garage and the heavy oaken entry door echo the trim effect. The roof is of cedar shingles.

Materials were chosen, the architect says, to blend with the natural surroundings.

The home provides Mr. and Mrs. Winton and young son Mark with 3,200 square feet of living space including four bedrooms and two and a half baths.

THE CONTRACTORS who built the home were Miller and Olsen. Kathy and Paul Steinmetz were the landscape architects.

The garden pages of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine recently featured a night-time picture of the Winton grounds, showing the attractive night-lighting effect that had been provided by the Steinmetzes in their outdoor design.

Now, on these two pages, you can gain a more comprehensive view of the handsome home, and of how it appears in the daylight.

IT IS A prime example of a home designed and built so as to take full advantage of the scenic possibilities that Marin County offers its dwellers. It has been built to provide its occupants a view. And it is itself an asset to the view of others.

It is the kind of a home that has won Marin national recognition as an architecturally advanced area.

THE KITCHEN cabinets are stained in a cherry wood finish, and the tile counter tops are an Inca gold pattern. Cove lighting was installed over sink and under all upper cabinets. Flooring is Armstrong Cambrian, a vinyl material. Gadget at left is an "intercom" master station. To the right of oven is built-in container for paper towels, waxed paper and foil.

Manhattan Hotels Offer Deluxe Accommodations

New York City plays host to about 15 million visitors from all over the world each year.

Where do these visitors stay?

RECENT SURVEYS showed there are about 500 hotels and motels catering to "transients" with a total of more than 118,000 rooms.

That means, according to latest available census figures, New York's innkeepers could provide accommodations for everyone in Pasadena, Calif. (116,407), Scranton, Pa. (111,443), Elizabeth, N.J. (107,698), Waterbury, Conn. (107,103), Peoria, Ill. (103,162), New Bedford, Mass. (102,477), Wichita Falls, Tex. (101,724) or countless other cities and other communities in the United States.

Most of the hotels popular with tourists who come by air, sea and land are in the midtown area of Manhattan where most of the action is — theaters, nightclubs, sightseeing attractions, shopping, etc. There also are several motels within easy walking distance of Times Square as well as on the outskirts of the city.

RATES RANGE from about $20 daily for a single room in the better-class hotels, depending on accommodations. Suites in the deluxe hotels run as high as $500 per day. For single men and women on tight budgets, the YMCA and YWCA offer overnight lodgings for about $2 and $5, respectively.

For those with fatter wallets or purses, there are ultra-modern deluxe hostelries like the American and New York Hilton, and the equally luxurious and modernized establishments such as the Plaza, Pierre, Regency, Carlyle, Waldorf Astoria and Sherry Netherlands.

The 50-story Americana on Seventh Avenue between 52nd and 53rd streets is the tallest hotel in the world. It was built in 1962 and houses 2,000 guest rooms and about 30 ballrooms and public rooms — all air conditioned.

THERE ARE scores of suites, varying from a small parlor with adjoining bedroom to the elegant five-rooms, three-baths Americana suite. It rents for $250 a day.

There are five restaurants, including the Royal Box supper club presenting top American and foreign entertainment plus dancing, the continental-style Le Ronde dining room, the Golden Restaurant and two coffee shops.

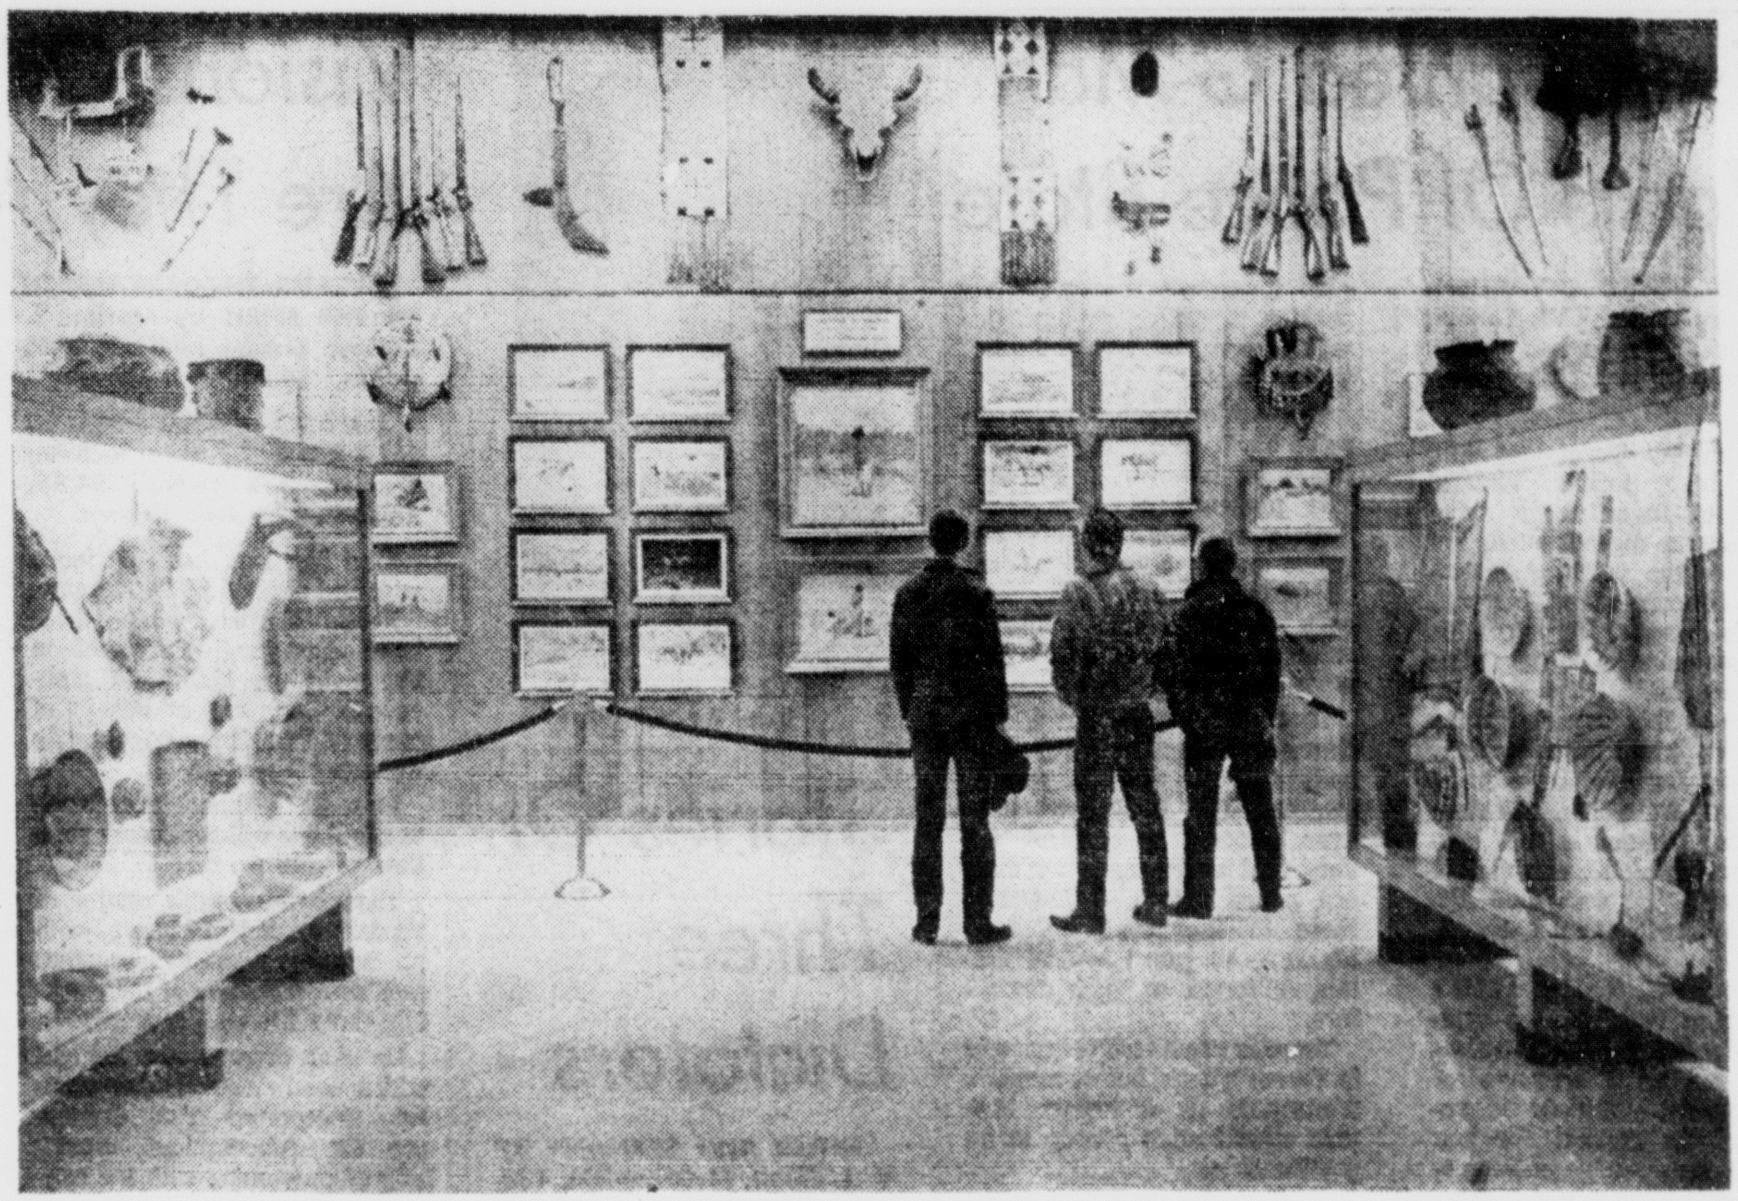
The Old West As It Really Was —



UNFINISHED PAINTINGS by Frederic Remington, considered the greatest of the Old West artists, are examined critically by three modern-day cowboy visitors to the Whitney Gallery of Western Art at Cody, Wyo. The gallery is part of that frontier town's Buffalo Bill Historical Center, a prime attraction for traveling western buffs.

The glory and glamour of the great American West, often distorted by movie-makers, has at least one authentic showcase in the remote town of Cody, Wyo.

Like jewels in the desert, the natural stone buildings of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center span 40 acres within the shadows of the Rocky Mountains that surround Cody. The center was built by frontier-minded townspeople who dug back through history in an effort to preserve an accurate picture of bygone pioneer days.

CODY IS A place where "dude" is a dirty word to some people. But show them the real article from the Old West and you've made a friend.

So enthusiastic are they about the Old West — the way it really was — that they have filled their 10-million-dollar exposition center with "the real article" and now are attracting annually some 200,000 visitors between May and October.

THE PEOPLE OF Cody are rugged individuals. On rodeo nights they converge like a thousand Marlboro men around their hoof-pounded arena. They often ride out after dinner to bag their limit of deer before sunset.

It is a wilderness town. Sunburned, wind-raked, it is also a town with a proud history.

Television shows and the movies often paint an Old West full of moralistic, clean-shaven, slicky-dressed cowboys, who blaze away with six-shooters which never seem to need reloading — but that's not the way it really was.

"OUT HERE WE just chuckle at most of the western films," says Dr. Harold McCracken, who has become one of the world's outstanding authorities on western America. He is the driving force behind the community's campaign to display an accurate reconstruction of the Old West.

Interest in the authentic Wild West has caught on to such an extent that enthusiasts over the world are rummaging through attics and basements in search of the treasured art, guns and spurs that bring very substantial prices in today's market.

Enthusiasm for preserving the Old West can be fairly pinpointed to 1917, the year Bill Cody died. A little memorial at the roadside near Yellowstone has grown to a giant collection which is housed in a two-million-dollar building. This building includes the Whitney Gallery of Western Art which counts as its patron the well-known Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, one of the most ardent admirers of Buffalo Bill.

DR. McCRACKEN, a white-haired and bespectacled gentleman, receives telephone calls from thousands of miles away, as people discover Old West paintings, guns or other ancient Western relics. So steeped in Western lore is Dr. McCracken that he can usually identify the item in question via long distance conversation.

"If we find one genuine article out of a hundred, it's worth it," he says.

Then he relates: "Just a little while ago I got a call from someone who thought he had found a real Remington painting, dated 1908 and signed 'Frederic Remington.' I'd never heard of such a painting — he did over 2,000 works —, but it proved to be authentic. Some of his paintings have sold for $250,000."

DR. McCRACKEN, the foremost critic of Remington art and the possessor of a great personal collection, is proudest of the museum's exhibit of that artist's work.

"Remington is the most important of the Old West artists, and we have on display the entire contents of his studio at the time of his death. This includes more than a hundred oil sketches (individual canvases are worth as much as $20,000) and an extraordinary assemblage of cowboy and Indian paraphernalia that he collected during his years of traveling the Old West."

Paintings by Remington and his contemporary, Charles Russell, are the most valued because both men rode with the cowboys, the U.S. cavalry and gold prospectors in the days before photography penetrated the frontiers. As a result, their paintings are the only real documents of the true Wild West.

THEIR DRAMATIC, story-telling paintings and finely detailed bronze sculptures are displayed by the hundreds in the Whitney Gallery wing of the historical center.

The Old West center is not limited to art, however. There are gold nuggets, stagecoaches, Indian weapons, scalps, beads, relics of Custer's massacre, buffalo, jewels and an arsenal of guns so diverse that they trace the progress of weaponry decade by decade.

A Wild West expert, curator Dick Frost comments: "The white man didn't defeat the Indian. The white man defeated the buffalo — killed 15 million of them, for meat, hides and bone china. When the buffalo were gone, the Indians were beaten."

ON EXHIBIT IS Buffalo Bill's "Deadwood Stage," salvaged after it was captured and burned by Indians, then displayed all around the world in Cody's Wild West show. This famous show spread the stories of the great American frontier to spellbound millions abroad.

Cody's Lucretia Borgia rifle is preserved except for a broken stock in much the same condition as in 1867-68, when he used it to kill 4,280 buffalo to feed railroad workers and their soldier guards.

"They tell a story about Cody having a fight with a cavalry officer who wanted to wait until after the buffalo were killed before he sent out his men and wagons for the meat. Buffalo Bill became so angry that he stampeded the buffalo herd right at the railroad camp and started shooting them down so close to the men that they didn't have to use the wagons," relates Frost.

NEAR AN HEROIC painting of Custer's Last Stand, there is a letter under glass from the officer who found the massacred men.

He wrote somewhat stiltedly to his superiors: "It is my painful duty to report that day before yesterday, the twenty-fifth instant, a great disaster overtook General Custer and the troops under his command."

Then there is the Indian necklace which a Sioux warrior later traded for food at a reservation. It was a string of 16 bones, the trigger fingers of Custer's men.

The Travel Pages

Ropes, saddles, knives, bows and arrows, spears, spurs, boots, chaps, hats, war bonnets, teepees, peace pipes, the hundreds of casual and necessary articles that red and white men of the West handled every day, are all there.

YOU SEEM TO smell the smoke of campfires, the sweat of long cattle drives, the gore of buffalo hunts, the exploded gunpowder of Indian raids and even the homecooking of the old stoves in the center.

Outside, the same mountains stand, almost as wild as a half century before. They still find old rifles, buffalo skulls and arrow heads in those hills.

They plan to expand the historical center again. Once the new wing, doubling the size of the exhibition, is opened next spring, a separate dome-shaped Plains Indian museum will also be added. A natural history museum, a western transportation center and a Cowboy Hall of Fame are also planned.

This will make the center the world's biggest living monument to America's most exciting age.

Disenchanted G-Man Warns Of Police State

THE POLICE ESTABLISHMENT by William W. Turner; Putnam's, 319 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

William W. Turner of Mill Valley is a former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent who became disenchanted, not only with the wallet indentification of the "G-man," but with police in general. He voices his disenchantment in "The Police Establishment."

Thesis of this volume by the man who tried unsuccessfully this year for the Democratic nomination from the Sixth Congressional District is that lawmen are trying to establish a police state. He sees civil disorders as revolt against this attempt.

In this view, the New Left's criticism of authority—as symbolized by the uniformed policeman—takes on a measure of respectability. "Society is reasserting its respect for the law in its most visible and equitable form and is aggressively seeking a police system that will respond to its standards," writes Turner.

The evidence he uses to develop his "police establishment" thesis is, however, a bit thin. The presence of John Birch Society members in big city police forces becomes a dark conspiracy — though the presence of police who refuse to enforce some laws earns Turner's approval.

That police work has a tendency to attract bully-boys and sadists is no news to anyone familiar with it. Turner, however, chooses to overlook the very real effort made by modern police forces — including those in the small cities of Marin — to guard against putting uniforms on such characters.

There is much food for thought in Turner's book, but its author's credentials as a former lawman should blind nobody to its partisanship.

Some Telling Points On U.S. Education

THE UNFINISHED JOURNEY: ISSUES IN AMERICAN EDUCATION; John Day Co., 202 Pages, $3.75. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Occasion for "The Unfinished Journey: Issues in American Education" is the 100th anniversary of establishment of the U.S. Office of Education.

If hardly anyone had been aware that this is such an anniversary year, that is scarcely surprising. After some initial efforts on behalf of vocational education, the office became little but a paper-shuffling operation for many years.

The U.S. Office of Education is far from moribund now, as President Lyndon B. Johnson points out in the preface to the book. The rest of the volume consists of an introduction by Harold Howe II, U. S. commissioner of education, and essays by 12 persons ranging from Walter Reuther to Esther Raushenbush.

As is usual for such a volume, the quality of the essays is uneven, and there is no overall theme to give them unity. But they include some telling points. Among them:

Ralph W. Tyler, director emeritus of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University: "The separation of the school from the world of work and the world of community service results in several unfortunate circumstances. To many students, school learning seems irrelevant. . . . From the standpoint of society, the separation of the school makes more difficult the transition from school to constructive community membership."

Reuther: "The fact is that poverty as an economic condition in the United States could be eliminated tomorrow by a more sensible and compassionate use of the economic resources already at our disposal."

Sidney P. Marland Jr., superintendent of Pittsburgh public schools: The sociologists' "recommended solutions are . . . expressed mostly by exhortation: integrate the schools; provide relevant learning for the slow and unmotivated; instruct in the salable skills; change the attitude of poor parents; correct illiteracy; innovate. And again, by all means, integrate. We are not sure what we mean by integration, but integrate anyway."

Stuff like this makes "The Unfinished Journey" worth reading, despite the many pages of "filler."

Stories Of Three Dictators

HITLER AND GERMANY by B. J. Elliott; McGraw-Hill, 134 pages, $4.50.

MUSSOLINI AND ITALY by C. C. Bayne-Jardine; McGraw-Hill, 120 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Although written by three teachers in England, these brief biographies have a liveliness, sense of drama and an insight not usually found in textbooks or even assigned as supplementary reading.

They should not only whet the reading appetite of and inform the prep school student, but should also refresh the memories of those who lived through World War II and in many instances give them a fresh view of the three dictators.

Of particular interest to this reader was the volume on Gen. Francisco Franco, the lone survivor of the three . . . still in command of Spain more than a quarter of a century after the civil carnage there.

Despite the grandiose plans of Hitler and Mussolini, it was Franco, considered a pawn, who used them and prevailed . . . the second-string dictator who won the game.

All three volumes are equally well-written and informative, but the Franco volume has another edge because the stories of Hitler and Mussolini have been told and retold many times.

In contrast, there have been only a few biographies of Franco written and there is a general tendency to overlook him because he doesn't present the flash or show of a Mussolini or engage in the mad histronics of a Hitler.

The stories of the three men are interrelated, however, and a reader can gain a much greater understanding of their era by reading all three volumes about Visions Of The Night— Are They Meaningful?

Man has long been intrigued with and puzzled by his dreams.

From whence come those little plays that take place in the nighttime before an audience of one, without benefit of stage and sometimes seemingly without rational plot?

In modern times, man tends to adopt one of two diverse positions toward dreams:

That dreams are a matter of experience and of chance, with no special significance other than as a reflection of the sleeper's daily life and concerns.

Or that dreams are fraught with special meaning when properly interpreted. That dreams are the subconscious mind's way of conversing with the conscious. That through dreams, God reveals his will and provides direction for man.

Morton T. Kelsey, author of "Dreams: The Dark Speech of the Spirit," is an advocate of that second belief.

Kelsey is a clergyman—rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Monrovia, Calif. — but he is also trained in philosophy and psychology, including study under Carl Jung.

For his contention that dreams are meaningful to man, Kelsey finds support in both religion and psychology. In theology, he points out that the Bible itself as well as other early ecclesiastical writings make repeated reference to dreams and dream interpretation. There was no great differentiation made then between visions and dreams. Both were accepted as God's means of revelation to man. "Visions of the night" were an important part of the Christian tradition.

Kelsey also details how both Sigmund Freud and Jung placed great emphasis upon the role of dreams in their exploration of human behavior.

Ironically, he says, as science came to a growing recognition of the importance of dreams to man, religion tended more and more to reject or ignore them.

This development Kelsey traces to the Aristotle-based teachings of Thomas Aquinas as refined by Rene Descartes and hardened by such theologians as John Calvin. Dreams, they taught, had no divine significance, and man should not look to them for help or guidance.

In his book, Kelsey states the flat-out conclusion that this comparatively modern-day belief is wrong, and that the old figures of the church who were much concerned with dreams and dream messages were right.

The problem and confusion, he says, is that dreams rarely offer forthright messages, but are couched in symbolism that requires a special interpretation. Only after proper preparation and study can such interpretation be made.

Kelsey urges the churches to reject the present-day total preoccupation with things material and rational, and to recognize again the attention that spiritual things should be accorded in theology.

It is an interesting and provocative presentation, offered in a heavily documented, rather scholarly manner, that does not, however, make for too difficult reading.

"Dreams: Your Magic Mirror" by Elsie Sechrist is quite a different kind of book, although its fundamental thesis corresponds closely to that of Kelsey.

Mrs. Sechrist is the national director of the Study Group Program of the Association for Research and Enlightenment, an organization dedicated to the study of the life and materials left behind by the late mystic Edgar Cayce.

She uses much less space and detail than does Kelsey in telling us why we should believe in dream messages. Instead, her book is largely a long recitation of cases in which dreams were interpreted by Cayce, or by herself, using Cayce's teachings. Mrs. Sechrist gives her interpretations in plain language, as contrasted to the symbolistic and sometimes vague vocabulary employed by her mentor, and apparently with supreme confidence that she is correct. The reader is often left with the alternatives of sharing that faith or remaining "up in the air," for only in a minority of the instances is there proffered any hard proof of the accuracy of the dream diagnosis.

Mrs. Sechrist also goes at considerable length into various more common dream symbols.

Her book joins a growing library of Cayce-rooted literature, as interest in the mystic seems to not only persist, but to grow. While "Dreams: Your Magic Mirror" is by no means the scholarly historical study that "Dreams: The Dark Speech of the Spirit" is, the two books are in general, in basic agreement. Just as Kelsey finds support for his beliefs in the significance of dreams in both religion and psychology, Cayce, too, was concerned with the subconscious and with God in his "readings."

According to both, the usually unheard or unheeded voice within could well be speaking for the Divine. "You had better listen," they advise.

More From An American Individualist

By DON KEOWN

THE OLD SOUTH by John Osborne; Time-Life Books, 192 pages, $4.95.

Oscar Levant is the only (barely) living American who comes to our mind as deserving the description "unique."

Just try to think of another who possesses both talent and wit at the genius level, who so blithely flouts convention and who is so completely an individualist.

Oscar Levant has been a study of unorthodoxy through times when America has been most strongly conformist. Yet, while remaining outside the mainstream and even hurling a steady barrage of insults at the establishment, he has nevertheless earned public admiration and acclamation.

Levant represents the rebellious spirit that burns, flickers or smolders within each of us. We seem to say of him: "There, but for lack of talent and sense of independence, might go I."

One of his biggest successes was his book, "Memoirs of an Amnesiac," a dazzling tour de force in which Levant gushed forth a torrent of hilarious anecdotes and reminiscenses from his colorful past, most of them rooted in the caustic wit of himself or others. Now he has followed that with more of the same in "The Unimportance of Being Oscar."

It is not quite the triumph that the memoirs were, for undoubtedly he used his "best stuff" first. But it is another brilliant exhibition of satire and humor.

Levant has a staggering acquaintanceship among celebrities. He knows or has known just about everyone of any importance in the arts, show business, public life, high finance and society. This has resulted in a vast store of anecdotes. Levant is blessed; too, with remarkable powers of recall. And his genius extends to a gift for putting those recollections into writing.

"The Unimportance of Being Oscar" is about the biggest $5.95 worth of entertainment to hit the market since "Memoirs of an Amnesiac." In his ribald, rapid-fire style, Levant pours forth a seemingly endless stream of stories, quick quips and strong opinions revolving around the big names of our times. He is always candid, totally irreverent, often cynical and usually caustic. Yet he can be charming and sentimental, as when he speaks of Franklin Delano and Eleanor Roosevelt as the two people he has admired most in his lifetime — "his father figure image will always be firmly etched in my mind." He is particularly fond, too, of Averell Harriman and the late Adlai Stevenson, and he comes to the defense of Robert Kennedy.

His critical evaluations of people from Phyllis Diller to the present presidential family are as precise and pointed as his stiletto wit. Ezra Pound, for instance, is a great poet, but not a great man — an accurate and concise judgment that stands in contrast to all the wordy apologies for or assaults upon Pound that have been written by literary pontiffs.

Levant's books are very, very funny. Beneath the mirth, however, there is the sadness of the writer's own inner torment. "Laughing at my miseries," he calls it, and with typical humor refers to himself as a "psychocondriac."

Despite his musical gifts, Levant never really achieved front-rank stature as a pianist or composer. His greatest fame was won as a panel member on the radio show "Information Please." With all his waggishness, he is better known as a raconteur than as a true humorist or satirist. Illness, irrational behavior, a weakness for drugs, a reputation for indolence have all been costly to his career or careers. But Levant does puncture pomposities that are in need of deflating. He's an entertainer, but he is considerably more than just a clown.

OSCAR LEVANT and wife June were pictured at the peak of popularity of their highly unconventional and unpredictable Southern California television show in 1958. Levant demonstrates in his "The Unimportance of Being Oscar" that the decade since then has not dulled his sharp wit.

ONE OPENS a new book in Time-Life's Library of America series with certain expectations — anticipating lavish color illustrations, the distinctive photo essays associated with these volumes, and a polished professionally written text that, because of space limitations, tends to be on the superficial side. All this smartly designed and attractively packaged.

"The Old South" by John Osborne, however, upsets and happily exceeds these expectations.

Here is one in which the text outshines the illustrations. In explaining the Deep South states of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina, Osborne has done an admirable job, packing a maximum of understanding into the space allotted him.

A Mississippian by birth, Osborne demonstrates a sympathy for the region. But it is an understanding unclouded by the romantic myths the South has so long cherished. Osborne tells it like it is.

At the outset, he asserts: "No aspect of the Southern myth is less credible that its insistence that white Southerners alone understand 'their' Negroes." But at the same time he points out that the white South did grasp one fact that escaped the white North — that there was no possible middle ground, either the Negro had to be accorded complete equality or total inequality. Unfortunately, Southern whites chose the second course.

Osborne puts the record straight, as when he corrects standard history book interpretations of the Reconstruction Period. True, there were scallywags among the "carpetbagger" Republicans and buffoons among their Negro politician allies. But basically, he declares, the Reconstruction troubles were of the South's own making, brought on by a stubborn intransigence. And the era produced some capable administrators and legislators who compare better than just favorably with the many demagogues the white South has spawned since that time.

Osborne has the knack for bringing forward oft-overlooked factors in the regional character of the South, including its resistance to change, such as the exceedingly high proportion of residents born and reared there.

He pulls no punches. In discussing the South's racial fixation, for instance, he notes that in 1964 a Democratic candidate for President, a Southerner, was rejected by the Deep South for "a notably mediocre Republican" on that issue alone.

For this reader, who grew up just two miles above the Jim Crow line, Osborne's text was replete with eye-openers.

Time-Life again illustrates generously and lavishly, and inserts a number of photo essays, the best of these a portfolio on William Faulkner's country with captions taken from his writing. But Osborne's text is the prime attraction with its meaningful discussions of such subjects as the Civil War and its build-up and aftermath, social mores, Southern literature, religious evangelism, political demagogism, race relations, civil rights turmoil and the rise of Republicanism. Atlanta and Florida, non-conformist pockets within a conformist region, are accorded separate treatment.

The Marinite can hie himself southward to the Monterey Peninsula or the city of San Francisco, northward to the redwood country or the Russian River, eastward to the delta of the Sacramento River.

One of the closest and most interesting of these areas is the wine country just to the north.

Before starting up Highway 101 for the vineyards and the wineries, the visitors might do well to acquire and study the new Sunset travel book "California Wine Country" (Lane, $1.95). From it he can pick up quickly and easily a wealth of information that will save him time and enrich his trip.

Sonoma County and the Napa Valley are the places Marinites usually think of as being California's wine country. Sunset properly accords them priority attention. But it also takes up such other wine-producing areas as Alameda County, the Santa Clara Valley, the Lodi area, the San Joaquin Valley and even Cucamonga, only an hour out of Los Angeles.

The softcover book is generously and interestingly illustrated with photographs, and the credit lines include a number of familiar names. Helpful maps are also included.

MOORE Publishing Co. of Box 3143, West Durham Station, Durham, N. C., a new concern, has announced its first publishing list, for this fall, consisting of three books — "Nine Negro Poets," an anthology edited by Duke University's Dr. R. Baird Shuman; "Anthology of Verse by American Negroes," originally compiled by Dr. Newman Ivey White in 1924, and "Stranger in Our Darkness," a novel by Joyce Crawford.

SEPTEMBER choice of the Book-of-the-Month Club is Gordon Rattray Taylor's "The Biological Bomb," a forecast of the not-too-distant future changes that biology is about to bring about in mankind's living patterns. The book was published earlier in Great Britain where it created great interest and was much acclaimed.

MURDER MOST FOULED UP by Tobias Wells; Doubleday, 190 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

As before, Wells is superior to most in his characterizations and in his depiction of police officers at work.

One does tire a bit of the propagandizing carried on by the police characters against the judicial leniency, public apathy, etc., that complicate their jobs. Still, detectives do gripe and grumble, even as do newspaper men and the minions of other occupations.

A more serious weakness is the fact that the mystery element to the story and the sleuthing that breaks the case are on the shallow side and not up to other aspects of the novel.

Wells isn't a John Creasey, or, for that matter, an Elizabeth Linington, either. But still, he writes a pretty fair yarn, and the reader is never in danger of being bored.

I THOUGHT YOU HAD FORGOTTEN

I thought you had forgotten how to sing
Of joy and love:
The morning thrush upon the wing
And spring again - again!
I though you did not care to dance once more
In the softness of the rain;
Or, with the wind in your willing arms, run.
That you were old and eyes so dim
You did not see the spinning spider's web.
I thought your lips had stopped to laugh
At children's songs and circus clowns . . .
How glad I am to know none of this is so—
You walk with spring
And wood violets grow where you have lightly trod.
I, to you, then can bring again
My heart to live with thee and God.

NOVATO — DOROTHY HEFFINGTON

MONTANA RIDE (1916)

Plunging bareback down a mountain
In the Springtime with the north slopes
Of the ridges still in snow;
Running hard to head the wild ones,
Leaping timber, fording streams —
Still I feel the pony's withers
As I ride him through my dreams.

RCA Victor Releases Feature The New San Francisco Maestro

By JOHN SUNIER

MESSIAEN: "Turangalila Symphony"; TAKEMITSU: "November Steps" — Toronto Symphony/Seiji Ozawa—RCA Victor LSC-7051:

One is torn between speechlessness and an urge to write a book about the amazing "Turangalila Symphony."

Although it was premiered in Boston in 1949, the only way for local residents to have heard the symphony has been an occasional broadcast of a taped European performance on station KPFA. Now here is our new San Francisco Symphony conductor in a smashingly Dynagrooved two-disc performance with very complete notes by Messiaen himself.

"Turangalila," a Sanskrit word, signifies simultaneously a love song, a hymn to joy, time, movement, rhythm, life and death.

The symphony, over an hour long, conains 10 movements, each as different from the others as day and night. There are four cyclic themes which reappear frequently throughout.

There is a huge orchestra, featuring the electronic Ondes Martinot, solo piano and a large percussion section.

While there are some parts of the work which may seem corny or obvious — a failing shared by Mahler's great symphonies — the over-all effect is absolutely breathtaking.

The fourth side piece by Takemitsu pits the traditional Japanese instruments, the biwa and shakuhachi, against a sterile, serialized orchestral background, and doesn't make it for this listener.

MOUSSORGSKY - RAVEL: "Pictures at an Exhibition"; BRITTEN: "The Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra" — Chicago Symphony Orchestra/Seiji Ozawa — RCA Victor LSC-2977:

Here is our talented new conductor again, in a pair of concert favorites that need a good shot in the arm after too many blah performances. And that is exactly what Ozawa gives both scores.

"Pictures" is especially spine-tingling, and without resorting to the re-writing and gimmicks which Stokowski had to use on his recent recording to generate the same excitement. This LP is sure to win some sort of award for excellence.

A fine bargain collection of music unusually off-beat for old RCA Victor.

several of his symphonies. This one, only sketched in 1842, was recently revised and filled out by a Swedish musicologist. It anticipates some of the rhythmic devices of Nielsen.

Blomdahl, the composer, who died very unexpectedly not long ago, is perhaps best known for his outer-space opera "Aniara." This music is much more conservative but interesting.

"PIANO MUSIC OF CARL NIELSEN" — John Ogdon, piano — RCA Victor LSC-3002:

Speaking of Nielsen, here are four of his compositions for piano, spanning most of his creative life and therefore showing a great deal of change.

The "Symphonic Suite Opus 8" seemed to this writer the most interesting, although the "Three Piano Pieces" of 1928 show such advanced harmonic structure that they sound downright contemporary.

Ogdon's hefty skill (and physical size) are ideal for this muscular music.

My copy was a bad pressing.

GINASTERA: "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra"; "Variaciones Concertantes" — Joao Carlos Martins, piano/Boston Symphony/Erich Leinsdorf — RCA Victor LSC-3029:

Martins played the premiere of the piano concerto seven years ago. His collaboration with Ginastera is full of pounding rhythms and colorful special effects.

But the better work is for me the "Concert Variations," a sort of Argentine version of Britten's "Young Person's Guide." Each of the 11 variations following the theme showcase the special character of a different instrument treated as soloist. It is one of the most immediately attractive contemporary orchestral works to be heard on disc, and this is its first stereo recording, replacing a fine old mono version by Dorati.

This is a very enjoyable programmatic work by Rimsky-Korsakoff, as good as the much more famous "Scheherazade." Until this LP, it was unavailable, an old mono Ansermet performance having been deleted some time ago.

It concerns the adventures of a Seventh Century poet who was the son of an Abyssinian slave. The rich sound of the Chicagoans is perfect for this music.

Miaskovsky is a very popular composer in the Soviet Union, the creator of 27 symphonies. This short one was actually commissioned by the Chicago Symphony in 1940. Not much to it, unfortunately.

This LP is the first issue in a project to record major 20th Century music that joins the World Music Bank and RCA Victor.

All three composers are British, the romantic Bax perhaps the best known for his "Tintagel." The longest work is the Bennett symphony, an abstract virtuostic piece to which the composer intended to give an extrovert mood.

Fine stereo.

"SMASHING THIRDS" — Fats Waller — RCA Victor LPV-550:

The Waller re-issues on the Vintage series keep coming; this is the fourth, and not to be missed by fans of the rotund, tongue-in-check keyboard genius.

There are some unusual piano solos, many of the hilarious put-ons of pop songs of the period (mostly 1937 recordings), and some rocking, swinging sounds by his modest quintet of cohorts.

Lyric-wise, these are the most fun: "Boo-Hoo," "Spring Cleaning (Getting Ready for Love)" and "She's Tall, She's Tan, She's Terrific."

The blues may be basic to jazz, but Fats shows us how happy jazz can sometimes be. Bless his soul.

Space Planning Outdoors

Space planning can be as important for the yard as it is inside the house.

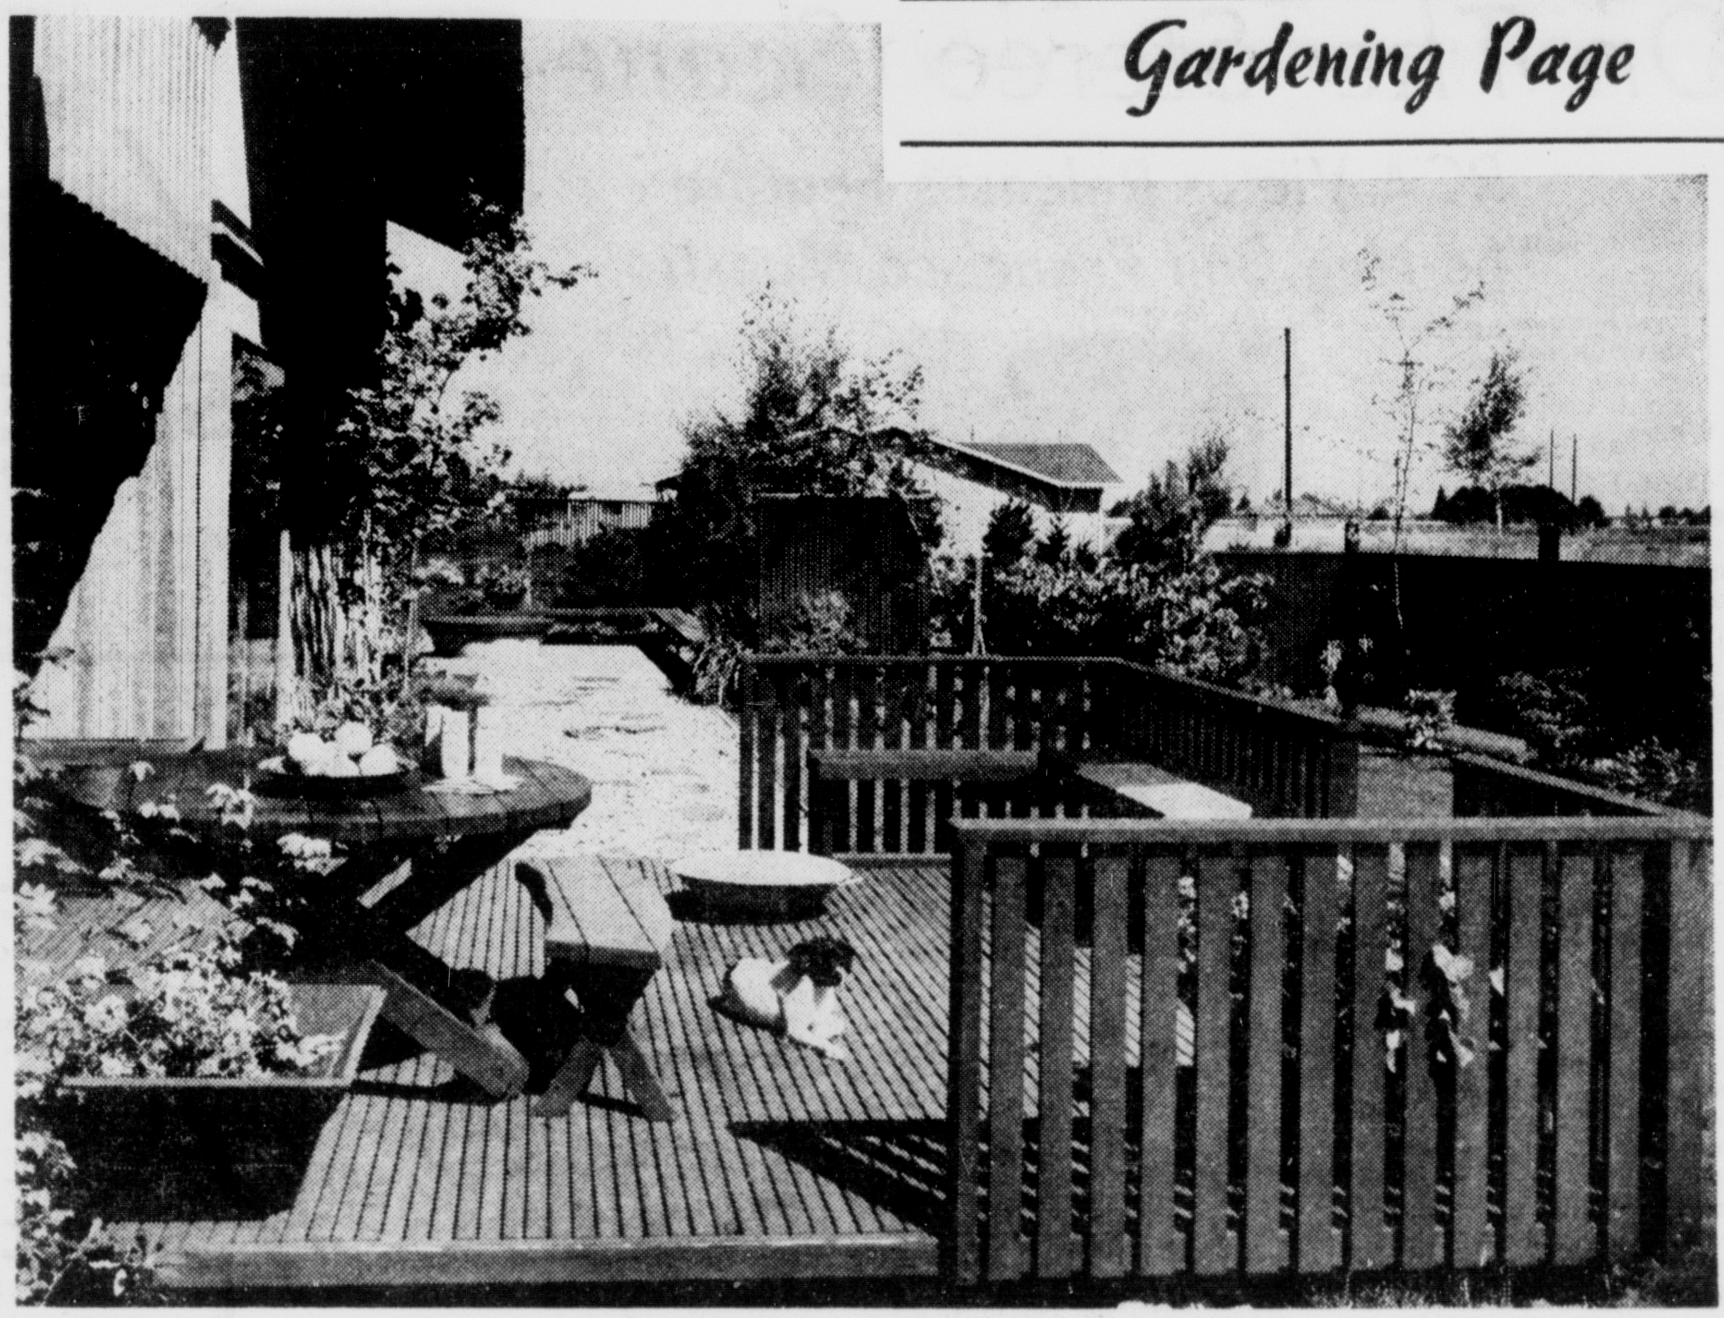
It's wasteful to designate all the land around the dwelling simply as "front yard, back yard and side yards." Instead, all that space should be treated as a succession of rooms, one or more fully walled for privacy, others more subtly defined.

It is wise, too, to "tie in" the outdoor room with the indoor room.

Thus the outdoor living room should adjoin or be near the indoor living room. This is the one for which screening and privacy are especially important. And if it is on the sunny side of the house, a shade is also a necessity.

Other possibilities include a breakfast room (off the kitchen), a playroom for small children, perhaps a gazebo-like affair the teen-agers can call their own, and a secluded garden for the parents adjoining their bedroom or heir study.

Remember: Structures should come first, in order to avoid damage to plantings during construction. But first of all, a master plan.



THE LANDSCAPING scheme for this yard has divided the grounds into a series of outdoor rooms or special use areas, some garden-oriented, others extensions of the interior spaces. The deck of Douglas fir two-by-fours connects to the kitchen and serves as a breakfast and snack spot. Beyond lies the main outdoor living room. (Western Wood Products Association photo).

When Vacation Is Over, It's Back To The Yard Work

It's a sad fact, Marinites, but you might as well face up to it: That summer vacation trip is over, or soon will be.

Then it's time to settle back to the routine of homelife, and that means yard and garden care.

If you were gone as long as two weeks, you can bet that your yard is in need of some special attention.

FIRST AND foremost, there is the business of the lawn. This has been a hard summer on Marin lawns, even with the best of attention. And a few days of neglect or semi-neglect while the home is vacant only serves to aggravate that situation.

The big thing, of course, is a good soaking or two with water. But first, to green up the grass, apply some quick-acting lawn food. And don't forget to mow and trim to eliminate that shaggy look.

THEN,THERE are the shrubs. These, too, can stand a thorough soaking. No matter how well-intentioned the person left in charge while the dwellers are away, they seldom take the time to give shrubs the really deep waterings they need.

Roses, no doubt, also will be crying for attention.

Faded blooms should be cut back, and a balanced rose food applied to promote a vigorous fall flowering. If aphids or other pests are at work, they should be foiled by a spray program. Look into the new systematic-type control products that combine the insecticide with a plant food in granular form, to be applied near the drip-line of the plants.

OTHER PLANTS usually in need of special post-vacation care are chrysanthemums (staking), fuchsias (pinching back and feeding with fish emulsion) and camellias, azaleas and rhododendrons (application of an acid type food).

As your final step in garden restoration, take care of your weeding.

Pulling and digging are still the two sure-fire methods. But chemical controls are available. Just be sure you are using the right control for the right weed.

Ideas For Covering A Pesky Parking Strip

Some people call it a parking strip, while others call it a multitude of other things (some not fit to print).

Some people are spared the problem of the parking strip by filling in the area with gravel or brick. However, there are people who prefer a planted parkway as it is much more appealing than one which is paved.

GROUND COVERS are preferred for parking strip areas as they are more resistant to neglect and can take a certain amount of punishment from adolescent trespassers and animals.

Aaron's Beard, a creeping cover which sends up countless short arms, is adorned by large yellow cups of gold. Aaron's Beard remains some eight to 10 inches in height, provides nice cover. It belongs to a family of many members, all of which bear the typical "Golden Cup." None grows the same way as any other, so be sure you get the right one for the parkway planting.

Point Reyes Ceanothus is another ground cover popular with Californians for parking strip use. This glossy-leaf creeper can be kept to about six inches in height with occasional trimming of the more erect shoots. In early spring, it bears lovely blue flowers, typical of the "Wild Lilacs."

ITS DEEP green, glossy foliage has a clean look and once it takes over your weed problems disappear.

There are such parkway "naturals" as the showy green, fast spreading Ornamental Strawberry, noted for its low growth and rapid coverage.

Another low grower which all but hugs the ground is Potentilla. The unusual shape of the leaves and the appealing soft green color provides an interesting texture, sure to please. Dainty yellow blooms adorn Potentilla during the spring and summer months.

Certainly English Ivy or Algerian Ivy are excellent choices for parkways, as either is fairly fast to cover and easy to maintain. Actually, all parkways could be beautiful with ivy, but it would make for a good many dull neighborhoods if the plant materials were never varied.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Keep azaleas, camellias and rhododendrons well-watered, especially if they are in containers.
- On the other hand, native plants such as ceanothus and fremontia require very little water, even during summer warm spells, providing they are established. Newly planted "natives," however, do need moisture.
- In cutting dahlias for indoor display, pound the base of the stems with a hammer hard enough to crush them. This aids in water absorption.
- Powdery mildew on tuberous begonias can be controlled easily with the proper spray. Products containing karathane or captan will do the job.
- For quick color, set out lantanas in a sunny exposure and out of the frost area.

A Time For Bleaching

Handyman's Page

The bleaching of wood came into its own some years ago when so-called blond furniture first became popular.

But there is evidence that wood bleaching was utilized centuries ago by professional wood finishers for an entirely different purpose — as a preparation for making wood darker.

This old-time theory, which still has many adherents today, is that wood will take a stain better if it is first made as light as possible. In fact, many of the novelty finishes of recent years are achieved after the wood has been bleached.

ANYONE WHO has ever done much wood finishing has had the experience of removing paint or varnish from an old piece of furniture only to find that some of the old finish remains imbedded in the wood. This is especially true when a dark stain had been used, either when the furniture was made or at some later time.

Sanding or steel wooling is useless in such a case if the stain is too deep. Bleaching then is often the answer, provided that the remaining stain is not too dark, which it usually isn't if a good varnish remover has been used.

While it is possible to get good results from a home-made bleach, a commercial bleach usually will work better, since it is scientifically prepared by experts.

BLEACHES VARY somewhat in content, making it very important that the instructions on the container be followed to the letter. Especially vital is the necessity of wiping off the bleach residue with whatever solution is recommended by the manufacturer.

A bleach is a strong chemical solution. Therefore, no bleaching project should be attempted unless you wear rubber gloves and work cautiously.

Incidentally, if the furniture piece has any hardware on it, be sure to remove it ahead of time.

BLEACHING USUALLY raises the grain of the wood. Therefore, about 24 hours after the bleach has been used, sand the wood lightly with a fine grade of paper, no matter how much the wood previously was sanded.

If a stain is to be used, it should be given a light coat of sealer before the final finish is applied.

Some of the newer finishes on the market are designed to do away with bleaching. While pigmented, they allow the natural grain of the wood to show through. Should you decide to try one of them, read the label first to determine whether they will produce the kind of effect you want, as some work well only on light woods.

Brighten Up The Bathroom

If your bathroom is beginning to look drab and old, but you're satisfied with the basic floor plan and fixtures, the odds are that the walls are the first thing that need dressing up.

This is far easier now with a new plastic product from one of the nation's largest manufacturers. It is a laminated plastic that comes in 18 patterns and is intended strictly for wall application.

The panels come in five sizes up to a big five-by-10 feet. They are only an eighth of an inch thick and have a foam backing. Because of this foam backing, they can go over almost any kind of wall surface and yet be straight and smooth.

The typical surface irregularities found in older walls are completely hidden without installation problems.

And because the product is plastic, its use in the bathroom is perfect. Condensation, water and splashing don't affect it. It's a good choice for installation around the tub or in a shower that's showing its age.

An appropriate name for this new bedroom group. The name means "view of Spain," and such a view is embodied in the traditional styling of this set.
The molded reproductions of original wood carvings are ours alone. And though they are a product of our own designers' creative talents, their roots are deep in the soil of Spain.
The handsomely carved fronts are combined with oak veneers and solids, finished with a rich brown distressed glaze. All drawers are center guided and glide on self-lubricating Raylex drawer runners. Hardwood drawer slides and dovetail construction throughout, of course. The mirrors are made from the finest plate glass, triple coated to provide many years of brilliant reflection.

THREE 17-year-olds from Washington, D.C., visited the Lincoln Memorial just before leaving on a four-week trip to Ghana. CBS news cameras followed them on their African visit and recorded their reactions for "In Search of a Past," the seventh in the CBS series "Of Black America." The program will be seen Tuesday at 10 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

Blondie's Husband Is Fan Of Strip

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When the producers of CBS's new comedy series "Blondie," tapped actor Will Hutchins to play Dagwood Bumstead, they did not know they had acquired a student of the comic strip.

"Very few people remember why Dagwood is such a bumbler," said Will over a noon repast that, minus bread, looked very much like a Dagwood sandwich topped by melted mozzarella cheese.

"Chic Young's comic strip was started in the late 1920s and one of the depression themes was that he was the son of a very rich man who, until he lost his money, had never done anything practical."

WILL, WHOSE specialty as a performer is projecting a gentle, naive quality, is a lanky six-footer who does not at all resemble the cartoon character of Arthur Lake, the actor who, teamed with Penny Singleton, made a career of playing Dagwood in almost 30 motion pictures.

Hutchins, who can kick dust and say, "Ah, shucks" very convincingly, actually isn't all that unsophisticated.

After "Sugarfoot," there was "Hey, Landlord," which barely staggered through the 1966-67 season. Miss Harty had a similar experience that year with "Occasional Wife," and both series were better than the ratings indicated.

WILL HUTCHINS
The new Bumstead

HUTCHINS, WHO looks much younger than he is — the early 30s — recently went through one of those amicable divorces from Christine Burnett, Carol Burnett's younger sister.

"What I'd love," said Will, "is to bring back Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton to play our children's grandparents. But I doubt if anyone would go along with that idea."

TV Tries To Bridge The Black-White Gap

By DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK (UPI) —"For the first time in my life a television program made me weep with rage and frustration," wrote a white housewife from Albany, N.Y.

"I now believe with all my heart America will soon find a solution to its many problems," wrote a Cleveland man who signed himself a "Black American."

"Although I am only 14, I now know there are things I can do in my own community," wrote a youngster from Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Such comments are representative fragments from thousands of letters pouring into the three major national television networks and the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company's television group.

OVER THE LAST three months Americans have undergone self analysis on a scale never seen before. Every man, woman and child within reach of a television screen has been given a chance, in vivid color and detail, to examine himself or herself in the context of the twin American problems: race relations and the rotting core cities. In some instances, they've been told what they, as individuals, can do to help solve the dilemma.

Big business has spent unprecedented amounts of money on special television programs designed to create better racial understanding. Executives who signed the checks admit more than idealism is involved. It's a matter of enlightened self interest. Without peace in the cities, there is little chance for business stability or growth.

Business, including such giants as American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and Xerox Corp., have spent about six million so far on approximately 24 hours of prime or near-prime time of TV soul-searching, a United Press International survey revealed. Local programming was not included in the survey.

ATT's INVOLVEMENT raised eyebrows even among its more sophisticated business peers. It handed the National Broadcasting Co. a blank check and blanket authority to produce a four-part series focusing on the urban crisis. Cost of the series, which opens Sept. 13, is estimated at two and a half million dollars and ATT will have no control over program content, nor will it see the series before the public. Commercial messages will be dropped.

"It's a matter of priorities," explained Walter W. Starley, vice-president of ATT's information services. "More than 70 per cent of Bell's plants are in the cities. Last year we hired 200,000 people, probably half of them from near or in the core cities. So, we're deeply involved. Others may be able to flee to the suburbs, but our future is tied to the cities. Besides, this type of program also sends a 'good signal' to our 850,000 employees."

In late June, the Institute of Life Insurance (ILI) sponsored, without commercial announcements, a three-part series on the Columbia Broadcasting System's TV network. The blanket title was "The Cities," and it cost more than 1.6 million dollars. Part of that cost involved advertisements in 117 newspapers in 92 cities (29 million circulation) and 17 national magazines (eight million circulation).

"LIFE INSURANCE companies have substantial interest in the cities," explained Blake T. Newton, president of the ILI. "The health and safety of our cities are basic to the health and safety of our society. Furthermore, life insurance companies hire thousands of city people and insure millions of city dwellers."

Xerox plunked down a million for its seven-part "of Black America" series with no commercial announcements. Ratings indicated 11 million watched the first segment July 2.

"We sponsored the series in an attempt to unify the country," said C. Peter McColough, Xerox president. "And we hope (it) helps both white and black America to change their attitudes toward each other. The condition of the Negro is inseparable from the condition of Xerox. He is a customer, a shareholder, a supplier, an employee. And he represents a pool of future manpower vital to this country."

ON JUNE 27 the American Broadcasting Co. telecast the first segment of its six-part "Time for Americans" series focusing on racism in the United States. It had no commercial sponsorship.

"We propose to examine the subject of white racism and its offshoots, one of which is black racism, and hope in this exploration to shed light on the subject," said Thomas H. Wolf, vice president and director of ABC documentaries. "We also hope to involve our audiences."

Westinghouse stations in Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and San Francisco broke first in the special programming race toward the nation's conscience. On May 20, in prime time and with selected sponsors, they telecast a three-and-one-half hour examination of the racial crisis entitled "One Nation Indivisible." Westinghouse subsequently offered the $300,000 production free of charge to other TV stations, network and independent. Fifty-eight accepted, giving the program exposure in 85 per cent of television land.

"HOPEFULLY, the examination of this basic problem will provide the equivalent of group therapy," said Donald H. McGannon, chairman and president of Group W. "We wanted to portray attitudes of white and black—on national and local levels—through ordinary people and then suggest ways in which average Americans can involve themselves in the solution. If one million are touched, you develop a movement that could close the gap."

Programs telecast so far have ranged from "gut" detail to intellectual pleading.

Cameras panned on rats and vermin scurrying through ghetto homes as Negro children played in filthy streets; history books without mention of the Negro's role on the world stage; singer Harry Belafonte's blasting the very program on which he was a panelist; Houston policemen assuming the roles of Negroes and submitting to mock search and questioning by Negroes playing the parts of white policemen in a psychodrama panel session; men like Henry Ford II, John W. Gardner and Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York calmly analyzing problems and suggesting solutions; Morris Spielberg, president of a merchants' association in Newark, N.J., and Donald Malafronte, administrative assistant to Newark Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio, swapping angry words over who bore the blame for 26 riot deaths in Newark...City Hall or ghetto merchants.

BUSINESS AND TV executives involved in this programming crusade believe it has helped bridge the white-black gap. All agree it must be a continuing effort to be effective.

"It's one thing for the brain to recognize the problem and another for the heart to understand it," said Straley of ATT. "We're hoping the visual, intimate impact of television will reach the heart."
